U. S. Warned To Rearm or Be 'China' of New World

'Banditry and Piracy on Large Scale' Prompt Admiral's Fear.

King and Maverick Urge Arms Parley

Resolution Slated to Be Introduced Today Held Doomed.

The Armament Crisis.

United States was warned by Admiral Clark H. Woodward, U. S. N., to prepare an adequate defense program quickly to avoid becoming the "Ethiopia or China of the western hemisphere."

Senator King and Representative Maverick will introduce resolutions today authorizing the President to call a naval disarmament conference although Mr. Roosevelt is reported to believe this is not proper time for such a meeting.

Japanese armies moved from north and south toward a junction on China's vital Lunghai Railway, crushing resistance.—Page 4.

Admiral Warns U. S.

"Gangster dictators" and "swaggering bandit legions" of Europe and Asia menace the United States which must prepare an adequate defense program quickly to avoid becoming the "Ethiopia or China of the western hemisphere," Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, commandant of the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y., told the United Press yesterday.

Admiral Woodward also declared it was not unreasonable to suppose some nation which borrowed from the United States in the World War "without intention of repayment" might conceive the "idea of taking by force a dawdling and unprepared United States together with many more billions in money."

Move Seems Foredoomed.

The veteran sailor's statement came while Senator William King (Democrat), Utah, and Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, were preparing to introduce in both Houses of Congress today resolutions authorizing the President to call a world naval limitation conference.

These resolutions seemed doomed to failure. President Roosevelt, whose views a week ago were believed to have been represented in Secretary Hull's statement that this Nation was "ready at any time to join with other nations in a common effort to bring about general limitation and reduction of armaments" was reported yesterday to feel the present is not a favorable time for such a conference.

Japan's refusal to inform the United States specifically regarding its naval construction plans is understood to have caused the change

Alcatraz—An Inmate's Story

Capone's Prison-Mate Describes First Sight Of U.S. 'Devil's Island'

Former Inmate Transferred From Lewisburg, Pa., Penitentiary for Fight With Fellow Convicts; Tells of Long Journey From East to 'The Rock.'

[The Post presents this story by a former inmate of Alcatraz Prison at its face value with no idea of criticism of the Department of Justice or any official of the island prison. This is the second story in a series.—Editor's note.]

By William Malcolm Ritchey, former Alcatraz prisoner, as told to Howard F. Wentworth.
Copyright, 1938, by The Washington Post.

WHEN they told me I was to be transferred to Alcatraz from Northeastern Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., I knew I was in for something.

I was scared, plenty scared. And if I had known then what I know now about that dreaded island, I would probably have died of fright.

The "big rock," as everybody knows, is reserved for the most desperate criminals. That's why I couldn't understand why they were shipping me out there. I was convicted under the Interstate Commerce act and drew five years.

I was sentenced on November 9, 1933, and had served nearly a year at Lewisburg when the trouble started. I got into a jam with some other prisoners. Four of them jumped on me and I hit one over the head and floored him. I was just defending myself, but Warden Henry C. Hill received orders to transfer me.

After I learned of the transfer order, I asked a guard where they were going to send me.

The Toughest Place.

"You are going to the toughest place this side of Hell," he told me.

There could be only one answer to that—Alcatraz. I didn't know anything about the place, except what I had heard in prison. And believe me, what I heard was nothing compared to what I found.

I left Lewisburg with a guard of United States marshals on August 17, 1934. We headed by train for San Francisco. On the way, we stopped and picked up some other Federal prisoners. Among them was the notorious "Machine Gun" Kelly. There were about 22 of us in one car.

The legends of horror on Alcatraz Island haunted us as we sped across the country. By the time we reached the West Coast, the whole cargo of convicts had a bad case of the jitters.

Handcuffed to my guard, I was taken in a taxi from the San Francisco railroad station to the waterfront dock of the Alcatraz shuttle-boat. There, I got my first taste of what to expect.

I was turned over to Federal prison guards and promptly searched. —although I had come from another institution. And that search wasn't any too gentle.

The guard who was to accompany me on the boat trip across the bay was stripped of his equipment—gun, badge, keys, etc. Then we stepped aboard the prison launch. Again I was searched from head to foot—and so was my guard.

"Big Rock" Loomed in Mist.

Once out on the water, I saw that "big rock" looming in the mist and my fears increased with every chug of the motor. Everything I ever heard about Alcatraz flashed through my mind—like I was drowning.

When we reached the prison dock, I was lifted bodily from the boat and told to stand with my hands up. The "reception committee" included six guards armed with rifles. Once more I was searched—and so was my guard.

"Look," I told the officer who was searching me, "I just came from Lewisburg—how could I have anything on me?"

"Shut up, mug," he responded and spun me around. "You are at a place now where you won't talk—remember that."

Another guard chimed in and told me I had "better remember to keep my mouth shut."

Then I was taken to the office of Warden James A. Johnson. En route, we passed through four double-locked doors with guards inside and out. Just before we entered the administration building, there was another door controlled by an electric eye.

"Eye" Sounds Alarm.

If anyone passes through that door and has any metal on his person, the "eye" automatically switches on three small lights and sounds a bell. I knew then why my guard was stripped of his gun and badge. And again I was searched.

Finally, everything was set for me to meet Warden Johnson. My guard took me into his office, handed him a sealed envelope and left. I later learned that guards working on the transport launch don't remain within the prison walls.

The warden's first question was:

"Do you swim, boy?"

"Yes, sir," I answered, "I consider myself a pretty good swimmer. When I was in school——"

"I didn't ask you for conversation," he cut in, "I asked if you could swim."

"Yes, sir," I said.

"Well," Johnson retorted, "remember this—you aren't going to get a chance to swim away from here."

He then recited to me the rules of Alcatraz. There is no written copy available, I learned. I was told about the "silent system"—that no prisoner is permitted to talk except 15 minutes once a week. I was told what I was expected to do and how to conduct myself. But I wasn't told of the punishment for infractions.

Following my interview with the Warden, I was sent to "isolation" —a two-by-four cell where I was to remain 30 days before being permitted to mingle with other inmates.

(Tomorrow—Ritchey will tell of the "mistake" he made during his isolation period and the consequences. He gets his first view of the real Alcatraz at the end of this 30-day period.)

32 Guns Fall To Thieves as Crime Grows

Pistols and Ammunition Taken From Sporting Goods Store.

100 Police on Special Duty Fail to Stem Holdups.

Enough pistols and ammunition for a minor war fell to Washington thieves yesterday, while augmented police night forces struggled with a new epidemic of banditry and robbery throughout the District.

Theft of 32 pistols and considerable ammunition was reported by Benjamin Atlas, proprietor of a sporting goods store at 927 D street northwest. He said the guns, of assorted sizes, from .22-calibre revolvers to .45-calibre automatic pistols, were valued at about $550 with the ammunition. Apparently, he said, the place was entered some time after 6 a. m.

A colored bandit who attempted a hold-up with a toy pistol was driven off by an elderly man whose woman companion attacked the bandit when he ordered them to put up their hands.

Woman Battles Bandit.

Charles Philips, 63, of 1348 Jefferson street northeast, was injured about the head during his battle with the bandit. He told police he and his companion, Mrs. Viola Brown, of 2620 Sixth street northeast, were in his car on Fourth street near Franklin southeast when the bandit entered the rear door and demanded their money. Mrs. Brown struck the man and Philips took up the fight.

He was struck repeatedly on the head with what appeared to be brass knuckles on the bandit's free hand and finally scrambled over the front seat. He and the bandit fell together to the ground, when the hold-up man fled, leaving his toy pistol.

A quickly organized manhunt failed to find the bandit in the neighborhood. Philips was treated at Sibley Hospital for head wounds and released. Both he and Mrs. Brown are employed by the Government Printing Office.

Lester Pratt, certified public accountant in the National Savings and Trust Building, reported a thief made the fourth call to his office after a year's absence some time Saturday night, looted the petty cash drawer and drank up all the liquor on hand. He said on his pre-

Insurgents Bomb Way Toward Sea, Seek Million Men

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Francisco Franco today sent fleets of bombers to wreck loyalist fortifications east of the Alfambra Valley and issued a mobilization decree to bring his armies to 1,000,000 men in preparation for his "big push" to the Mediterranean east coast.

Scores of bombing planes ranged across the lower Aragon front blasting the government's new defense positions around Aliga and cutting a wedge for Franco's drive toward the seacoast, 68 miles away.

British Gale Drives Seas 5 Miles Inland

London, Feb. 13 (A.P.).—The third destructive gale to sweep the British Isles in a month moderated today but North Sea waters rolled 5 miles inland near Horsey on the Norfolk coast, inundating thousands of acres and forcing evacuation of a small village.

The Channel steamer Princess Astrid reached port at Ostend, Belgium, today after heavy seas frustrated six attempts to enter last evening.

5 Die, 24 Missing After Crowd Jams at Rail, Swamps Ferry

Australians Capsize Boat by Rushing to Rail as U. S. Warship Louisville Leaves Sydney; American Crew Saves Many.

By the Associated Press.

Sydney, Australia, Feb. 13.—Five persons were drowned today and 24 unaccounted for after scores of passengers rushing eagerly to the rail to witness the departure of the United States cruiser Louisville capsized the ferryboat Rodney in Sydney Harbor.

Police credited the heroism of members of the Louisville's crew with averting a greater disaster for the 150 ferryboat passengers. The Rodney heeled over and sank in 72 feet of water, pitching scores of men, women and children into the water and trapping others inside the cabins.

Capt. R. W. Mathewson, of the Louisville, saw the Rodney's dangerous list and ordered the Louisville to slow down so its wash would not add to the danger.

"As she rounded our stern," Mathewson related, "passengers rushed to the side of the boat. It heeled, spilling people into the water."

An officer of the cruiser leaped overboard and swam to the sinking boat. He broke a cabin window and rescued a woman caught within.

The Louisville anchored immediately and lowered every boat to assist other harbor craft in picking up victims. Some of the crew leaped into the water to support the victims until boats could reach them.

Laborer Beaten To Death on Maryland Farm

Coroner's Jury Is Called Immediately on Case of Hired Man.

Harry Janish, about 45, laborer on the farm of William Thorp, two miles west of Laurel, Md., was found apparently beaten to death in the yard of the farm last night at 11:30 o'clock. Dr. Bryan P. Warren, who examined the body, estimated he had been dead approximately two hours.

Justice of the Peace James Vawter of Prince Georges County immediately impanelled a coroner's jury at White's undertaking establishment in Laurel. He would not advance an opinion of the manner of Janish's death until after the inquest, though he said the man was terribly beaten.

Janish lived in a small building at the rear of the farmhouse. His wife and two children live in Laurel with his mother.

Mobile Monster, A 30-Pound Otter, Comes to His End

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 13 (A.P.).—Mobile's mysterious "monster of Fisher's Alley" died today—the victim of shotgun pellets.

The beast was identified as an otter of about 30 pounds and about 4 feet from head to tip of tail.

Thus ended the terror among colored folk since the "monster" stalked from its habitat in a nearby swamp and began a series of foraging expeditions in the city several weeks ago.

In the dark of early morning, the otter slithered through the fence at the home of Charles Ardoyno, member of the fire department, to be met by a ferocious attack by Ardoyno's collie dog.

4 Cities Periled By Rapidly Rising Michigan Floods

Detroit, Feb. 13 (A.P.).—Perils from flood waters increased hourly tonight over Southern Michigan.

Conditions in at least four localities—Grand Rapids, Mt. Clemens, Flint, and Lansing—caused grave fears, with rivers flooding the vast areas after heavy rains of the week-end.

Rescuers Plan To Blast Path To Four on Floe

Ship Exchanges Flare Messages With Russian Scientists at Pole.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 13.—The polar rescue ship Taimyr planned desperate efforts to blast a channel through the last 20 miles of ice-packed Greenland Sea to the floe on which four Russian scientists have been drifting through Arctic seas since last May 21.

Throughout last night the rescue party aboard the Taimyr exchanged signals with the ice-bound campers by searchlights and flares. On a neighboring floe in the jumbled ice field the campers hastily were clearing a landing field for the airplanes carried by the Taimyr.

Lack of a spot for the planes to take off, however, caused the rescue crew to try to blast a way almost to the floe and then bring the campers by foot across the remaining yards of treacherous ice.

The Taimyr radioed Moscow she was ploughing through the thick ice at about 5 miles an hour.

So near was the rescue ship that the campers could see the smoke from her funnels, rising in the light north-northwest breeze.

Bund Meeting Broken Up by Legionnaires

Fists Fly at Buffalo as Ex-Soldiers Interrupt Kunze Address.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Fist fights broke up a meeting being addressed here tonight by German-American Bund Leader G. Wilhelm Kunze.

A general riot call was sent out by police as American Legion members, making up nearly half the audience of 700, began battling with bund members and sympathizers.

The flareup came after Kunze had been interrupted in the course of his address by former Assemblyman Frederick Hammer, of Buffalo, who ascended the rostrum and began delivering a speech of his own.

When Hammer asserted his forebears had left Germany because they "did not like the military aggression" of the nation, a voice in the hall shouted, "Coward!"

"Come outside with me and we'll settle that right now," Hammer shouted.

In a moment a half dozen fights flared up throughout the hall, and women spectators fled screaming.

The 15 policemen on duty at the hall went into action separating the scrappers and dragging them out of the hall.

Kunze came to Buffalo tonight after two other up-State New York meetings of the bund had become the object of close scrutiny by American Legion members last week.

He engaged in a verbal battle with legionnaires at Syracuse Thursday night, where the war veterans bombarded him with questions during the meeting. A hotel in Rochester on Friday night cancelled a reservation for a bund meeting, and Kunze contented himself with addressing a small gathering elsewhere in that city.

Nazi Policy Assailed By Cardinal Faulhaber

Berlin, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Michael Cardinal Faulhaber criticized Nazi persecution of the Roman Catholic Church today—anniversary of Pope Pius' coronation.

Speaking at Munich, the cardinal expressed regret that the church was unable publicly to refute "unfounded accusations" that the Holy See was allying itself with communism, because of "restrictions imposed by authorities" in Germany.

Ishbel MacDonald Betrothed To Drummer in Village Band

'Once London's 'First Lady,' to Marry Customer at Her Inn.

London, Feb. 13 (A.P.).—Ishbel MacDonald, once Britain's "first lady" as official hostess at 10 Downing street, acknowledged today her engagement to Norman Ridgley, 34, who beats the drum in the Speen village band.

Her brother-in-law, Dr. Alastair McKinnon, in announcing the engagement, said "Mr. Ridgley undoubtedly is one of the best darts players in the village."

Miss MacDonald, daughter of the late J. Ramsay MacDonald, former Prime Minister, met Ridgley at the Old Plow Inn at Speen, Buckinghamshire, which she operates.

Ridgley, who is nicknamed "tinker" because he has been a house painter, electrician's helper and ditch digger, was known as a "regular customer" at the inn.

Miss MacDonald was entertained in Washington in 1930 when she

Avenger Finds Swindler After 7-Year Search, Lures Him to Death by Posing as Fresh Dupe

By the Associated Press.

Armonk, N. Y., Feb. 13.—A seven-year quest for vengeance, dating back to a bunco-game transaction involving diamonds which turned out to be glass, ended in jail today for Joseph Horowitz, 42, a Bronx shirt presser, in connection with a midnight knife-and-hammer slaying.

Police said Horowitz confessed to the killing of a man variously known as Cagliano and "The Weasel," no address.

"I've been looking for him for seven years," Armonk authorities quoted him as saying. "Everywhere I went, I looked for him—even when I went to the beach at Coney Island. In subways, on the streets, I never gave up the hunt."

Finally, according to a statement police said he made to them, Horowitz spotted Cagliano in a tavern. He recognized him, he said, as the same man who swindled him in 1931 on the purchase of glass "diamonds" which he bought for $2,500 after authentic duplicates had been appraised by a jewel expert as worth more than $5,000.

Police said Horowitz took his brother-in-law, Bernard Benkler, 30, of Brooklyn, to the tavern and when Cagliano failed to recognize him, he made a date to sell "The Weasel" a farm owned by Benkler at Ashley Falls, Mass.

They started to drive to the falls late last night, police said, and en route Benkler stopped the car on the estate of Helen Frick, near Armonk.

George Petry, caretaker on the estate, said he heard a violent argument between two men and went to Armonk to notify police. Returning with Patrolman William R. Orman, Petry recognized Benkler's car, and with the two men in custody, they went to the scene of the dispute where "The Weasel's" knife-hacked and bludgeoned body was found in a thicket.

Benkler was held as a material witness as police sought further identification of the dead man.

Hitler Trades Britain Peace For Colonies, Berlin Hears

Austrian Reconciliation Held Move to Meet London's Conditions.

Reich Keeps Duce Informed of Action

Vienna Cabinet Confers; Nazis in Government Believed Subject.

The European Situation.

Diplomatic quarters believed Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler may announce return of Germany's war-lost colonies when he addresses the Reichstag next Sunday.

Reports indicated Hitler's conference with Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria may have been a prelude to announcement Britain had agreed to a colonial concession on condition Der Fuehrer pledged recognition of Austrian independence.

German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was reported en route to Italy to report to Premier Mussolini on the outcome of the Hitler-Schuschnigg conference.

Colonial Deal Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—Return of Germany's war-lost colonies may be Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's big surprise for the German people when he speaks to the nation at the Reichstag session February 20.

Reports circulating in diplomatic quarters are that negotiations are afoot between Germany and Great Britain involving an important colonial concession for Germany, but requiring first the fulfillment of certain conditions.

One of these conditions was described as a definite clarification of Germany's relations with Austria, removing once and for all the fear of sudden aggression in that sector.

Schuschnigg Talk Preliminary.

Assurances given by Hitler himself to Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria would be a vital element of such a clarification; and that was why it was necessary for the two to meet yesterday in the surprise conference at Berchtesgaden, Hitler's Bavarian mountain retreat.

Premier Mussoloni of Italy, whose chances of reaching a satisfactory agreement with Great Britain have seemed brighter recently, was said to have urged Schuschnigg to accept Hitler's invitation.

From the Italian point of view, nothing could be better than a settlement by which Hitler would get colonies, Mussolini British recognition for his conquest of Ethiopia and Austria would cease to be Europe's apple of discord.

Duce Wants Settlement.

Further indications that Hitler and Mussolini were working together in an effort to reach a lasting solution of the Austrian question was seen in the emphasis with which it was stated Il Duce was being kept informed on all developments arising from the Berchtesgaden talks.

It was reported in Vienna that Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop had gone directly from Berchtesgaden to Rome, but this was denied in official quarters.

(Until now Austria has been the stumbling block in an otherwise pleasant German and Italian friendship. Although the two Fascist countries are allies, Italy has looked askance on German efforts to unite directly with her little German-speaking neighbor.

(In the early days of Hitler's power, Mussolini mobilized troops on the Austrian border, a direct way of saying "hands off." Both countries, however, need Austria to complete the wedge they have driven through Europe from the Mediterranean to the North Sea.

(One suggested solution, which even now may be in the making,

Responsibility In Arms Ban Put On McReynolds

Rep. O'Connell Calls Him 'Great Fascist' at Loyalist Parley.

Representative McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was branded "a great Tory and great Fascist" in an address yesterday by Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, before the first national convention of Veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade. The brigade is composed of American volunteers fighting for the Spanish loyalists.

O'Connell held McReynolds largely responsible for the embargo on arms for the loyalist government. He urged that "we rewrite the foreign policy of the United States, and in so doing, destroy Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese leaders who would wreck the peace of the world."

He asked for a "new peace policy" calling for "collective security and concerted action," by which the United States would distinguish between the aggressor and his victim."

Fight Against Fascism.

The speaker told his audience, "You must fight against domestic fascism in the United States; you must demand extension of the WPA, PWA, and CCC, and a real housing program."

O'Connell, whose address was repeatedly interrupted by applause, asked for abolition of the Federal Reserve System and establishment of a Central Bank of the United States, owned, controlled and dominated by the people of the United States."

Preceding O'Connell's address, Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, asserted that "Great Britain, Russia and the United States could absolutely stop the wars in China and Spain by refusing to sell war materials to the aggressors.

Calls Issues Same.

"In no previous war has American sentiment been so overwhelmingly on one side as in the Sino-Japanese dispute," Teigan claimed. "We have equal justification for aiding the people of Spain. The same issues are involved—the imperialism of Japan is identical with that of Mussolini."

Teigan noted the 1937 increase over 1936 of American export of war materials to Japan. "The present policy is such that we are actually helping the aggressor," he said.

Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, who, with O'Connell, visited loyalist Spain last year, also addressed yesterday's session.

Other speakers included Joseph Lash, executive secretary of the American Student Union, and Herbert Benjamin, general secretary of the Workers' Alliance of America.

Seaman Elected.

The veterans elected Carl Bradley, San Francisco seaman, as their executive secretary. Of the 60 former fighters registered at the conference, about 45 are said to have returned from Spain because of injuries or illness suffered while fighting with the loyalist forces.

Today a delegation of four of the veterans will present at the White House resolutions indorsing both President Roosevelt's Chicago "quarantine" speech and O'Connell's proposal to limit application of the neutrality act to "aggressor" nations.

The delegation will include Capt. Paul Burns, national commander of the veterans; Capt. Hans Amlie, former commander of the George Washington Battalion of the Lincoln Brigade and brother of Representative Thomas R. Amlie (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Lieut. Walter Garland.

C.I.O. Head Backs Bill to Put Teeth In Labor Measure

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, expressed support for the Wagner bill to enforce compliance by Government contractors with the labor relations act, in a letter sent yesterday to Senator Robert S. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, sponsor of the bill.

The letter points out that the bill is "in consonance with the program of the Committee for Industrial Organization and of the United Mine Worker of America," as adopted at the Atlantic City conference of the C. I. O. and the recent convention of the U. M. W. A.

Ashurst Gets 3,600 Wires, Reads None

By the Associated Press.

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, revealed yesterday he never reads a telegram—unless it is from Arizona.

The Judiciary Committee chairman said he had received 3,600 telegrams concerning the proposed "equal rights" amendment to the Constitution, which the committee is studying.

"But I never read them," Ashurst told reporters, grinning.

But if a telegram arrives from his home State, that's a different story, the Senator said.

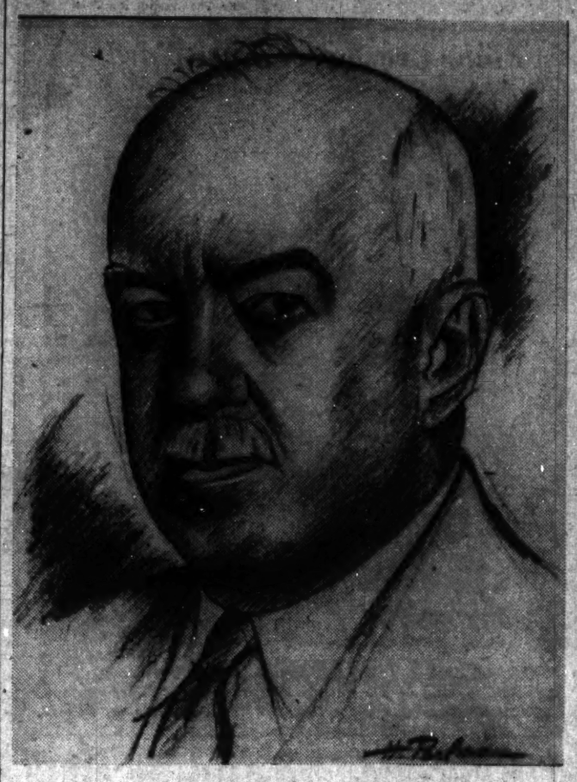
Cleary Keeps Trinidad Group Interested in District Issues



GEORGE L. CLEARY.

Believes Citizens' Organizations Should Center on Community Problems Although Not Overlook City-Wide Items Like Traffic and Taxes.

By Christine Sadler

For the most port, issues which occupy the attention of the Trinidad Citizens Association deal with everyday community problems close to the welfare of the individual homeowner and housewife. Such matters as safety for school children, playgrounds and transportation facilities receive preferential attention, according to George J. Cleary, civic leader who has been president of the group for the past six years.

"We by no means overlook city-wide problems relating to police, traffic, taxes and justice," Cleary says, "but we are essentially a neighborhood organization."

If he had to pick out two items which he thinks should be highlighted on the society's program at the present time he would select playgrounds and a branch library, he declares.

Wants Library Branch.

"No child in the community has adequate public library facilities. Before a new main library building is erected," he says, "I think we should have branches easily accessible to all Washington communities."

The Trinidad association dates back 20 years, or to the days when the Bladensburg avenue section of the city north of H street northeast was brand-new.

Since that date the one-time wooded area has been developed as a pleasant residential zone and a thriving commercial and industrial area has sprung up along New York avenue northeast. The latter part of the community remained undeveloped for several years for lack of the proper approaches and want of legislation which would permit the railway to cross the avenue.

Trash Plants Removed.

"It required much work to obtain a unity of opinion in regard to an underpass at West Virginia avenue and a railway bridge near the same location," the president recalls.

One of the most beneficial fights in behalf of the neighborhood was that which led to banishment of trash-reduction plants from the city limits. President Cleary was a leader in this battle. Many residents of Trinidad, now enjoying the comfort of clean surroundings, remember well the smoldering trash dumps and the municipal reducing plants with their noxious odors.

Cleary insists and has all members of his association behind him in his belief that the approaches into Washington from the northeast should be as ornamental as those in other sections of the city. By far the largest portion of traffic from Baltimore and Philadelphia enters Washington through Bladensburg road and New York avenue, he says.

Personally, Cleary is not eager for suffrage for the District. He believes that the commission form of government gives a more direct response to needs of the citizens than any other form which might be tried under existing conditions, he declares.

Social Work Extensive.

Cleary came to Washington from Philadelphia 35 years ago and is assistant superintendent of plate printing in the Bureau of Printing and Engraving and the head of a family of eight children.

His contributions to the welfare and social service activities of the District have been many. He has just completed his twelfth consecutive year as president of the Saint Vincent de Paul Societies of Washington, one of the leading groups of charity organizations. He is a director of Catholic Charities, a trustee of the Community Chest, a director of the Boys' Club of Washington, a delegate to the Holy Name Union and a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

In spite of the work which these duties entail, he finds time to attend almost every baseball and football game held within reach of Washington, watching of athletic games being his favorite past-time.

Wednesday—E. B. Lawless, president of North Capitol Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Clipper for 72 Rolled Outdoors

Seattle, Feb. 13 (AP).—The 109-foot hull of the three-deck, 72-passenger South Seas Clipper being constructed for Pan-American Airways was "unveiled" today at the Boeing Aircraft factory.

The gigantic flying boat grew too big for its quarters and was wheeled outdoors. It will require nearly a month to affix the 152-foot wings, Boeing officials said.

The completed ship will weigh 41 tons and will stand more than 28 feet high, nearly twice the size of the present transpacific clippers.

Holt Opposes Big Navy.

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 13 (AP).—United States Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, told the Wheeling Intelligencer today that "the proposed naval appropriation is for offense, not defense," and added that he did not intend to support "such a program."

Record Program Arranged.

An all-Tchaikovsky program will be presented at the "Evening with the Victrola" at the main Public Library Building today at 7:30 o'clock, it was announced yesterday by Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian.

2 Experts Call Foreign Trade Prosperity Path

Sibley Hails Favorable Balance; Anderson Attacks Tariffs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Two trade experts gave an affirmative answer to the question, "Is international trade a path to prosperity?" in a Nation-wide broadcast tonight.

Harper Sibley, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said this country gained a favorable balance of $262,000,000 in foreign trade last year.

W. Leland Anderson, cotton exporter, of Houston, Tex., advocated additional reciprocal trade treaties as a means of increasing the world consumption of United States cotton and other products.

Sibley said American machine methods of agriculture and manufacturing were in the majority of cases cheaper than foreign manpower production and that, consequently, "cheap human inefficient hand labor need not always be feared by American efficiency."

Anderson said the United States lost the world cotton market after 1930, when the Smoot-Hawley tariff act was passed.

"It is clear," said Anderson, "that any barriers placed in the way of exports have a bad effect. High import duties are just as much a barrier against exports as they are against imports, for we cannot hope to sell abroad unless we also buy from abroad. High tariffs are a two-edged sword against the farmer."

"Few persons contend," Anderson said, "that rates should be slashed recklessly, but careful study of the subject has shown that gradual reduction can be made in connection with corresponding reductions by foreign nations. This type of solution is exemplified in the reciprocal trade agreements which have been and are being negotiated by our Department of State under the able direction of Mr. Cordell Hull."

"Without economic well-being in the great productive and manufacturing enterprises in the United States," Sibley said, "the export trade of many foreign countries will be in the doldrums. I have observed this particularly in many of the countries of South America.

"Their prosperity is largely dependent upon our own. If our factories buy their copper and their tin, and our working people their chocolate and their bananas and all the other tropical products, then their peoples are employed and their national standard of living rises. . . .

"The part our own Government is taking . . . has unquestionably given leadership in restoring the trade of the world."

Aiken 'Bawls Out' 'Smug' Old Guard At G.O.P. Banquet

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Gov. George D. Aiken of Vermont rode back to his Green mountains and his berry patches today with a tale to tell of how he had harried the "self-satisfied smugness of old guard Republicanism" in straight Vermonter language and made members of the National Republican Club like it.

He still was dazed, he said before he left, at the way they liked it. It was not what he had expected of the 350 blacktied guests in the Waldorf Astoria's starlight room, gathered to hear fulsome praise of Abraham Lincoln and the Republican Party. The governor asked them if Lincoln might not be "ashamed of us." Stunned at first, they stood to cheer him when he sat down.

"I didn't expect it of them down here," he said. "I wasn't talking to them, anyway. I was talking to 15,000,000 voters who don't belong to any party."

Hawaii Delegate Renews Island's Statehood Plea

Samuel Wilden King, Hawaiian delegate in Congress, yesterday answered opponents of the proposal for Hawaiian statehood by declaring "It is hardly conceivable" the United States will much longer desire to keep an "industrious and progressive American community" in the subordinate positoin of a Territory.

King pointed out the Nation is dedicated to the principle of self-government and equal treatment for all its citizens and added that "nothing less than statehood" would extend that principle to Hawaii.

A joint House-Senate committee, which recently made a survey of the islands and held hearings on statehood, is scheduled to report to both Houses by tomorrow.

You Don't Need to Have a Band To Swing It in Tennessee Hills

Sixteen Couples Strut Stuff at Post Folk Festival Here.

"Ladies bow, and gents duck under;
Hold your holts, and swing like thunder."

That, folks, is part of a dance pattern they swing by in Tennessee. No jazz band is needed. Handclapping will do, if the feet know the running step.

Sixteen dancing couples or more will come from that State to participate in the fifth annual National Folk Festival to be held in Constitution Hall May 6, 7 and 8 under sponsorship of The Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

Fred W. Colby, State executive officer of the AAA, who has been connected with the Agricultural Extension Service of Tennessee for many years and knows the folk material of the State from "a to izzard," will be in charge of the group and also will contribute some of the festival's choice ballad singing.

For three years, the authentic singing games, running sets, square dances, and ballad music of the Tennessee group have added to the folk festivities—and given Colby a chance to compare square dance steps with teams from other parts of the Nation.

FRED W. COLBY.

They All Are Right.

"My conclusion is that each section has different square dance steps and arrangements, but that all of us are right. Even in different parts of Tennessee the sets are different," he said in Washington yesterday.

Colby enjoys singing Anglo-Saxon and Irish ballads, and accompanying himself on the fiddle or banjo.

"The Eighth of January," based on experiences of Andrew Jackson's soldiers at New Orleans; "Casey Jones," the song about an engineer whose widow still lives in the State, and "Shoot the Buffalo" he mentions among tunes indigenous to Tennessee soil.

"Hunters who settled the State had first to clear the canebrakes of buffalo. 'Shoot the Buffalo' became both a song and a dance," he said.

The Anglo-Saxon heritage of words of the song are evident, although they were put together centuries after some of the ballads still alive in Tennessee were written. For instance:

"Right hand your pardner. Away we'll go.
Ramble in the canebrake. Shoot the buffalo."

Hundreds of Verses.

There are hundred of verses to the song, of course, as to most folk songs—and almost every time a dance is given a new one is added. Steps of the "Shoot the Buffalo" weave an intricate pattern. The step is a running one, which is found mostly in Kentucky and Tennessee. A running set, Colby explained, can be done just as well without music as with it.

Among other games and square dances specialized in by the Tennessee group include: "Chase the Rabbit," "Lady 'Round the Lady," "Old Betsy Liner," "Ocean Wave," "Jolly Miller" and "Skip to Ma Lou."

Sacred harp singers from the Smoky Mountain region may accompany the team this year, to sing fa-so-la tunes that have lingered in the area and are sometimes known as the white spirituals.

Ford Union Denies Vote to Join C. I. O.

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers of America tonight said the Ford Brotherhood of America, Inc., an independent union, had voted to disband and join the U. A. W. A., but an F. B. A. official declared the action was illegal.

The announcement was made by Richard T. Frankensteen, assistant president of the U. A. W. A. and director of its Ford organizing committee. Raymond W. LaBar, brotherhood attorney, said the vote on U. A. W. A. affiliation was illegal and could be regarded only as a resolution.

The F. B. A. claims a membership of 21,000, but only from 200 to 300 persons were present at this afternoon's boisterous meeting.

John D. McDowell, brotherhood chairman, and LaBar said the meeting was called to consider relief for unemployed members, but Mike Dragan, a U. A. W. A. organizer who was present, insisted its purpose was to vote on joining his union.

Coughlin Asks Meaning Of 'Quarantine' Policy

Detroit, Feb. 13 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin said today the American people "have a right to hear officially explained the meaning of the new word 'quarantine' as applied to foreign aggressor nations."

In a broadcast address the Royal Oak, Mich., priest asked, "Does it mean we shall continue minding out own business or begin minding other nations' business?"

McNair Decides to Run In Pennsylvania Primary

Pittsburgh, Feb. 13 (AP).—Former Mayor William N. McNair announced today he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

"I am running to give the Protestants somebody to vote for," he said, adding: "Look at the names of the others who want to be Governor."

Puerto Rico Acquits Eleven Nationalists

San Juan, P. R., Feb. 13 (AP).—Eleven nationalists today were acquitted of the slaying of a policeman in the Palm Sunday riot at Ponce. Among those acquitted was Julio Pinto Gandia, acting president of the nationalist organization. However, he will be taken by plane tomorrow with nine accomplices to Atlanta, Ga., to serve a five-year sentence for attempting to kill Federal Judge Robert A. Cooper.

Byrnes, Taber On Air; Debate Reorganization

Backers Are Abdicating in Favor of Dictatorship, Says Representative.

By the Associated Press.

The Administration's Government reorganization bill drew criticism from Representative Taber (Republican), New York, and support from Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, in broadcast addresses last night.

Taber said every member of Congress supporting it "is abdicating in favor of the dictatorship every vestige of power or influence he has left after five years of usurpation."

Byrnes described the measure as "a sincere and honest effort to reduce the number of independent establishments, to provide the President with more effective tools of management, to improve the administration of the civil service, to provide a really independent audit and to make the executive branch more responsible to Congress in the hope that thereby we may promote the welfare of the people."

Taber attacked especially the provision to make the Comptroller General, now named by Congress, an appointee of the President. He said the object was "obviously to destroy the control over administrative expenses which an independent officer of the Government must exercise if there is going to be any maintenance of liberty in America."

Byrnes said the bill, by providing for an auditor general, would bring to Government the same fiscal checks used by most business concerns.

Expert Doubts Farm Bill Will Increase Prices

Declares Administration Program Won't Help for 'Next Few Years.'

By the Associated Press.

An Agriculture Department economist predicted yesterday that the Administration's "ever-normal "granary program would not raise farm prices materially within the next few years.

Louis H. Bean, economic adviser of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, made the prediction in discussing the "longer-time outlook" for agricultural prices and purchasing power.

He said that, judging from the history of farm prices and some of the major supply and demand factors, including the new farm legislation, "it would appear that the purchasing power of farm price, and therefore of farmers, is likely to be lower over the next few years than it was in 1935-1937."

The expressed goal of the new legislation, which Democratic leaders predict will be approved by an overwhelming majority when it is voted upon finally by the Senate today, is the raising of farm prices and income to "parity" levels insofar as that is practicable. The bill was approved by the House last week.

Officials say a parity price for cotton would be about 16 cents a pound, compared with the prevailing price of slightly less than 9 cents. A parity price for wheat would be $1.15 a bushel, instead of the present quotation of about 95 cents, and for corn would be 84 cents, instead of about 60.

Beer Drivers To Extend Lines In Strike Today

Claim Co-operation of Many Retailers in Wage Fight.

Striking truck drivers in eight District beer and soft drink firms last night prepared to extend picket lines today in their drive for higher wages and shorter hours.

Following their walkout at 6 a. m., Saturday, the strikers moved to persuade retail firms dealing with the eight distributors to cancel their orders.

Henry Myers, business agent for the striking Beer and Soda Water Drivers Union, said last night the drivers had received co-operation from many customers. They plan to continue the strategy today.

A. D. O'Connor, official spokesman for the eight firms, said the strike had hurt business. He did not estimate how many orders had been canceled.

The strikers are seeking an $18 minimum weekly wage, with 6 cents commission per case sold, and a 54-hour week. This would replace the prevailing rate, under a contract in effect in 1937, of $15 a week and 5 cents per case commission.

Officials of the firms involved announced Saturday they would not meet the strikers demands. O'Connor said that new drivers would be employed today to fill remaining vacancies left by the 100 or more strikers. A total of 68 replacements were hired Saturday.

Four Legislatures Must Act on Bill To Rebuild Span

Four separate pieces of legislation will be necessary before a new "honeymoon bridge" can be constructed at Niagara Falls, officials said yesterday.

Before a bridge can be built to replace one recently swept away by ice, the following is necessary:

Approval by the New York State Legislature of a bill to authorize construction of the new bridge.

Passage of a similar bill by Congress.

Aproval of such a bill by the Province of Ontario, Canada.

Passage of the bill by the Canadian Parliament.

Aproval by American Army Engineers also is necessary.

Alleged Va. Slayer Gives Up, Is Jailed

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 13.—John Sprouse, wanted for the slaying of Tandy Gibson Monday night at the home of Mrs. Marion Gibson, in Georgetown, walked into the Albemarle County courthouse late this afternoon and surrendered to Sheriff J. Mason Smith. He was lodged immediately in the county jail. It is understood Sprouse had been in hiding in Chesterfield County. An indictment charging him with the murder of Gibson was returned yesterday.

Students Vote for La Follette Bill

More than 100 George Washington University Students yesterday indorsed a bill introduced in the Senate by Robert La Follette authorizing appropriation of $269,000,000 over a period of 13 years for control of veneral diseases.

Indorsement of the bill was voted unanimously in a meeting of the Legislative forum.

Howard Ennes, editor of the Hatchet, student newspaper at George Washington, said he would appear at hearings on the bill, to be held today by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Six Army 'Fortresses' to Fly to Buenos Aires

Six of these monster Army bombers, shown winging over Manhattan, will fly from Langley Field, Va., to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Six of the Army's "flying fortresses," led by Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, of Washington, will fly from Langley Field, Va., to Buenos Aires, Argentina, this month to take part in inauguration ceremonies of President-Elect Dr. Robesto M. Ortiz February 20, the War Department announced yesterday. The announcement said date of departure would be made known later.

Col. Olds will lead the formation in the big bomber in which he set a transcontinental speed mark for military aircraft recently. The other planes will be commanded by Maj. Vincent J. Meloy, Capt. Neil B. Harding, Maj. Caleb V. Haynes, Capt. Archibald Y. Smith and Maj. Harold L. George.

Each of the six giant craft will carry a crew of eight officers and men except the leader, which will carry nine. In the leading plane will be Maj. Edwin R. McReynolds and Lieut. Edwin L. Tucker, who accompanied Col. Olds on his speedy flash across the continent.

Pectin Derivative Discovery Proves Aid in Healing Wounds

New Antiseptic Discovered by Indiana University Scientists Particularly Effective in Streptococci and Staphlococci Infections.

By the Associated Press.

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 13.—In the pectin which housewives use to make jelly, Indiana University medical experts have discovered a quick-healing remedy for wounds. The details were made public here today.

Pectin is a jelly that comes from boiling fruits and vegetables. Apples are rich in it. Curiosity as to why scraped apple helps to cure diarrhea led to the wound-healing discovery. It already was known that pectin was the effective part of the apple.

These facts suggested that pectin might have the power to kill germs. An exploration of this possibility was undertaken by Dr. Edith Haynes, biologist of Indiana University school of medicine; Miss Grace Washburn, dietician; Dr. Charles A. Tompkins, and Dr. Matthew Winters.

Pectin proved to be a powerful germ-killer—but only under certain circumstances. Its effects depended on the acidity or alkalinity of the place where it was applied. In acid areas pectin often wiped out the bacteria. In alkaline environment the jelly completely lost its antiseptic value.

It proved well-suited to deep, infected wounds. It was easy to apply. Pectin powder was mixed with water and had no irritating effects. In these wounds it sometimes caused complete disappearance of the dangerous streptococci and also of staphylococci.

Pectin proved most useful for infected bone marrow, or osteomyelitis. This is a serious risk when broken bones penetrate the flesh. In some cases of osteomyelitis the recovery time was cut in half.

The jelly remedy also has cured some other wounds, both deep and superficial, which failed to respond to common types of treatment. The pectin used in these experiments came from citrus fruits—from the white, inner layer of the skins.

Jury Investigates Chinese Killing

A coroner's jury today will investigate the murder of Henry Der Soo, Chinese laundryman, who was slain in his bed in the 1400 block H street northeast, February 1.

William Der, alias Nee Yee, 36, of 622 H street northwest, a waiter, who had been held by police for several days in connection with the crime, will appear at the hearing.

Detectives yesterday said there is still much work to be done on the case before it will be ready for trial. They said they have never been able to locate the strong box containing nearly $1,000 which was taken from Soo's living quarters. No weapon has ever been located.

Principal witness today will be Mary Testvie, colored laundress, who was employed by Soo at the time of his death. She furnished police the description of a Chinese who visited with Soo before he was slain.

Shots End 5 Days Of Robbing by Pair

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 13 (AP).—Buckshot cut short at Clinton, Miss., last night five days of robbery and terror by two men who police said escaped from a Texan jail Tuesday.

Police said one of the men, identified as W. E. Burnett, 37, of Gladewater, Tex., was shot and killed when surprised in the act of robbing a garage. The other, Roy E. Johnson, of Oklahoma City, was captured. Officers said Johnson signed a statement describing a series of holdups and robberies since escaping from the Texas jail.

'Just Killed a Man,' Knifer Tells Police

Norris W. Dutch, colored, 28, 2219 Pomeroy court northwest, was being held on a murder charge last night after he walked into the Second Police Precinct Station yesterday and said "I have just killed a man."

At about the same time Dutch arrived, police were summoned to Freedman's Hospital, where Wilford Fairfax, colored, 29, of the same address, had been pronounced dead of stab wounds. He received a knife wound in the heart, doctors stated.

Investigation showed the men had become involved in an argument at the Pomeroy court address. Dutch was badly cut when he appeared at the station house and had to be treated at Fredmen's. He will appear at an inquest tomorrow.

Wright Jury Begins Sanity Trial Today

Los Angeles, Feb. 13 (AP).—The jury that convicted Paul A. Wright of manslaughter for shooting his wife, Evelyn, and John Kimmel, his business associate, resumes its session tomorrow, this time to determine whether he was sane or insane at time of the slayings.

Wright was convicted solely on his plea of not guilty. Under California law, his other plea of not guilty by reason of insanity became a separate issue for the jury's determination.

Watkins Glen, N. Y., Feb. 13 (U.P.).—The entire staff of the Schuyler County welfare bureau has been dismissed and the office "closed until further notice." Welfare Commissioner Darwin F. Thompson said tonight the action was taken because members of the staff failed to report to work on Lincoln's birthday.

15 Pulpits Praise Woman's Ax War On Slot Machines

Alton, Ill., Feb. 13 (AP).—Fifteen Protestant ministers read from their pulpits today a resolutoin praising Mrs. Irene Kite, "the lady with the ax," who is in jail as result of a crusade against slot machines in Madison County.

In her cell at Edwardsville, the county seat, the blonde, buxom woman was reported "quite happy and contented." She was taken there Thursday on warrants charging peace disturbance and malicious destruction of personal property in her ax-wielding exploits.

Beginning her campaign unheralded, Mrs. Kite smashed slot machines in seven taverns in Alton December 18. Warrants against her were issued by State's Attorney Lester Geers after she had broken another "one-armed bandit" in an Edwardsville tavern February 1.

New Storms Buffet Flooded California

San Francisco, Feb. 13 (AP).—A new disturbance from the Pacific today brought gales, torrential rain and snow to the Pacific Coast, intensifying flood hazards in northern California and carrying the record-breaking storm through its eighteenth consecutive day.

A downpour registering 1½ to 4 inches in 24 hours along the upper Sacramento River increased apprehension in the Colusa-Sacramento area, where the stream had been overflowing for days and levees were weakened by saturation.

Falling Plane Misses Autos, Crashes in Yard

Arlington Pilot Hurt; Maneuvers Ship to Save Motorists.

Spinning down toward the crowded Richmond highway, a powerless airplane was brought under partial control yesterday to miss the Sunday traffic and crash in the yard of a home near Beacon Airport, Alexandria, Va.

The craft was piloted by William H. Gamble, 33, of Arlington, Va., who suffered severe cuts of the head and internal injuries. He remained conscious long enough to direct rescuers in cutting him from the crushed cockpit.

The plane struck the earth a few yards from the home of W. F. P. Reid, chairman of the Fairfax County board of supervisors.

According to witnesses, Gamble had circled over the airport preparatory to landing when the motor suddenly went dead at a height of about 300 feet and went into a tailspin.

Cutting the switch to avoid fire hazards when his plane hit the ground, Gamble fought to gain control of the ship and fly over the highway, which was crowded with Sunday auto traffic.

A friend of Gamble and an eyewitness to the crash, said the flier had almost righted the plane when it struck the ground.

Members of Reid's family and airport employes rushed to the scene and cut the aviator from the cockpit as he gave painful directions. Gamble remained conscious until he reached the Alexandria Hospital, where his condition was described as fair.

An employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co., Gamble has been flying for five years, friends said, and was considered an expert aviator. He was piloting his own plane at the time of the accident. Gamble is married an has a 4-year-old son, William, jr.

One Shot, Two Escape At Indiana Penal Farm

Putnamville, Ind., Feb. 13 (AP).—Guards at the Indiana penal farm near here shot down and captured a fleeing inmate today while two other prisoners got away.

Benjamin Rogers, 19, of Vevay, fell with a revolver bullet in his right hip. His condition was not serious. William Hall, jr., 25, of Franklin County, and William Whitney, 18, colored, of Dearborn County, were still at large tonight. The three scaled a 10-foot barbed-wire fence.

Tong Opens Doors To White Members After 1,000 Years

San Francisco, Feb. 13 (AP).—One of the oldest Chinese tongs broke 1,000 years of tradition today by admitting a large group of Americans to its sanctum as a means of starting a fund campaign for medical relief to Chinese war sufferers.

Educators, civic leaders and church workers climbed four flights of stairs in a dingy Chinatown building to reach the luxurious inner camber of the Loong Kong Tien Yee Association and take tea and rice cakes from brightly gowned Chinese and American hostesses.

Tong officers said it was the first time anywhere an organization of its kind ever opened its inner chambers to a group of whites. Individual American friends of Chinese occasionally had been admitted to tong houses, but never before were permitted there in numbers.

Tong Chairman Thomas G. Lew told the guests that money raised in the campaign would be sent directly to Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek with the specification that it be spent for medical aid only.

3 U. S. Cruisers Only 'Guests' at Singapore Fete

Britain Stresses Secrecy in Opening Strongest Navy Base in World.

By the Associated Press.

Singapore, Feb. 13.—With American officers as "unofficial" observers, Great Britain will tomorrow inaugurate the most powerful naval base in the world, strengthening her strategy in the war-torn Orient.

Three American warships, the cruisers Trenton, Memphis and Milwaukee under command of Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend, will be the only "foreign guests," a fact authoritative circles considered significant.

Utmost precautions have been taken to prevent espionage at the inaugural ceremony for the $150,000,000 "Gibraltar of the East" which took 15 years to build. Hand-picked guests will be under the watchful eyes of special police and will be allowed to enter only certain areas.

The United States cruisers arrived today from Australia, where they had attended the sesquicentenary celebration. After formal gun salutes from British warships, Admiral Townsend exchanged official calls with British Vice Admiral Sir Alexander Ramsay, commander-in-Chief of the East Indies station.

A massed array of Britain's fighting strength in the Orient was present.

The naval base controls the Empire's vital link between the East and West. Its great guns, with ranges up to 50 miles, command the narrow straits linking the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

Taking part in the ceremonies were 24 warships of the East Indies and China squadrons, native and British troops of the Singapore garrison with units of royal artillery, and seven bombardment squadrons of the royal air force with their transport planes.

The base will be opened officially by Sir Thomas Shenton, Governor of the Straits Settlements, when the prow of his yacht, Seabelle II, enters the huge graving dock, cutting a ribbon stretched across its 130-foot mouth.

Escorting the governor's yacht will be two destroyers, marking the first time in history Great Britain has been able to send a warship into drydock east of the Suez Canal.

The naval base is on the north side of Singapore Island, facing across the Straits of Johore to the Malay Peninsula mainland.

The port of Singapore is on the south side of the 27-mile long and 14-mile wide island. At Changi, on the Eastern end of the island, facing out to the Pacific, long range batteries defend the approach both to the city and the main base on Johore Straits.

The Blakang Mati and Brani islands, south of the city, also are heavily fortified, while to the east of the naval base is the military air base which can accommodate hundreds of warplanes.

The largest and most powerful guns in the world—18-inch guns mounted in solid emplacements—command a range of 50 miles.

Aid-China Week Urged by Angell To Stop Japanese

London, Feb. 13 (AP).—Sir Norman Angell, Nobel Peace prize winner, today urged an "aid-China week" to marshal world-wide opinion against Japan's campaign in China.

At an "international conference" aimed to strengthen a boycott of Japanese goods, Sir Norman suggested poster parades, picketing and newspaper pledge schemes to enlist boycott supporters.

A second Nobel Peace prize winner, Viscount Cecil, of Chelwood, declared "our purpose is to stop the war in China and insist on the withdrawal of all Japanese forces.

"If we don't succeed, we desire citizens of all countries here to clear themselves of complicity in the Japanese crime."

Fred Davis Dead; Veteran Reporter

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 13 (AP).—Fred Davis, 68, veteran Washington correspondent for the Sioux City Journal and other Iowa newspapers, died at his home here last night.

He was director of publicity for Taft's 1912 campaign, represented Frank O. Lowden in five Western States in his preconvention campaign in 1928 and held positions with the Democratic Natoinal Committee in the Al Smith and first Franklin D. Roosevelt campaigns.

Davis, a law graduate of De Pauw University, served as United States marshal for the Northern District of Iowa under Presidents Harding and Coolidge, and under President Roosevelt was with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The funeral will be held here Tuesday.

Girl, 19, to Face Jury Today on Death Charge

Philadelphia Feb. 13 (AP).—A 19-year old college girl for whom, her father said, death holds a strange fascination, chatted calmly with friends in the seclusion of her home tonight on the eve of her trial for murder.

Blonde Mary K. O'Connor will be called before a jury in criminal court tomorrow to answer the Commonwealth's charges that she killed 5-year-old Nancy Glenn last Labor Day because the child begged for a bicycle ride.

would gain Austria's firm friendship through German and Italian guarantees of her independence, provided the Austrian Nazi party was allowed to develop internally as it could.)

Party leaders and workers were ordered to see that radio amplification facilities were available so that every man, woman and child in the country could hear Der Fuehrer's pronouncements from the Reichstag rostrum Sunday. No athletic or other events were allowed to be scheduled which might distract public attention during the hours of the Reichstag meeting.

Vienna, Feb. 13 (AP).—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, by his Saturday interview with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany appears to have strengthened Austria's position as the connecting—but independent—link of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Schuschnigg conferred with his cabinet today on what seems to have developed as the main point of his interview with Hitler at the German Fuehrer's Berchtesgaden estate in Bavaria:

Fulfillment in letter and spirit of the Austro-German accord of July 11, 1936, which would allow the Austrian Nazi party to develop however it can with German Nazis agreeing not to interfere.

Neutral observers got the impression Austria was willing to work with Germany and Italy, provided the two powers recognized the principle of Austria's independence as an authoritarian, Christian state.

The situation is no wise clear yet, but three somewhat contradictory details have developed in the 24 hours since the conference:

1. Schuschnigg must decide soon whether he will put two or three Nazis in his cabinet, thus recognizing Austrian national socialism as a movement on a par with the monarchist movement despite the ban on political parties other than the pro-government Fatherland Front.

2. Premier Mussolini of Italy strongly advised Hitler and Schuschnigg to patch up their quarrel over Nazi influence in Austria in order to save the Rome-Berlin axis. Vienna political circles said Il Duce used as a threat his own growing friendship with Britain, which might isolate Germany.

3. Schuschnigg told Hitler Austria needed an entirely free hand and did not propose to change her policy. Fatherland Front circles said the chancellor won this point.

Clouds, Rain Predicted On Usual 'Blue Monday'

Cloudy and occasional rain was the typically "blue Monday" forecast of the Weather Bureau for today.

Warmer weather is expected to accompany the rain with a minimum temperature of about 48 degrees predicted. Yesterday's maximum of 57 was recorded at 4 p. m.

Carol May Bar Many Classes From Suffrage

Limitation of Vote Studied as New Constitution Is Drawn.

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Feb. 13.—Proposals limit the right to vote and to tighten age requirements for legislators are being studied by a commission planning a new Rumanian constitution to replace the one suspended by King Carol, it was learned reliably tonight.

One of the measures would raise the voting age to 30 instead of 21 as hitherto and require that candidates for the chamber of deputies be at least 30 instead of 25 and candidates for the senate 50 instead of 40.

Convicts would be denied the franchise and it was suggested that women, previously permitted to vote for municipal candidates, be deprived of the vote entirely.

To solve the long-standing problem of illiterate voters it was proposed that they form groups of 25, 50 or 100 each—the point had not been settled—and name an educated representative to vote for each group.

Still another proposal was that voters be required to have some definite employment. A measure to regulate and censor newspapers also was under consideration.

The old constitution, suspended last week with establishment of the new government of Dr. Miron Cristea, patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox Church, provided that constitutional changes be made by Parliament.

It has now been suggested that proposals for constitutional amendments be taken by municipal or federal officials before mass meetings throughout the country for consideration and vote there.

Former Premier Octavian Goga, whose anti-Cemitic government was ousted by King Carol, departed for Switzerland with his wife for treatment of heart and circulatory ailments.

Goga suffered a heart attack Saturday, and was ordered by his physicians to go abroad. Eventually he plans to stay on the French or Italian Riviera.

Attacks Dictators.

Bucharest, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Nicolas Jorga, former premier and one of the key ministers of King Carol's three-day-old military dictatorship, tonight openly attacked the dictators of neighboring countries in what was interpreted as a friendly gesture toward Great Britain and France.

Japanese Gain On Both Sides Of Lunghai Line

Chinese Army Shattered in North; Hwai River Defense Crushed.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, (Monday) Feb. 14.—Japanese armies rolled relentlessly from north and south today toward a frontal junction on China's vital Lunghai Railway, crushing stubborn Chinese between the two halves of their viselike offensive.

On the northern side of the Lunghai corridor into central China an army of 15,000 Chinese had been shattered. Reports were that a Japanese vanguard had reached the Yellow River and was preparing to cross for an assault on Kaifeng, Honan provincial capital.

On the southern side massed artillery and planes had broken Chinese resistance on the north banks of the Hwai River, permitting establishment of a broad front while a spearhead column drove farther north along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway to stab at Suchow, heart of the Lunghai defenses.

Japanese military authorities said their long heralded "big push" was under way in all sectors of the central front.

Chinese reports virtually confirmed the Japanese claims but insisted Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops were falling back in orderly fashion to take up new positions.

"Today's success represents a 60-mile advance in two days," the Japanese said.

Planes Raid Canton.

Canton (Monday), Feb. 14 (U.P.).—Japanese warplanes roared over Canton's outskirts today dumping bombs on railroads and villages in a series of mass raids that aroused fears that the long-awaited drive to smash Canton had started.

Chinese sources said more than 40 planes took part in the raids. The heaviest damage was done at Saichuen in the northwest sector.

Chinese feared the raids were a prelude to an ceffort to take the city, which is the big munitions inlet for the Chinese armies in the interior.

Wedding Ring Bought Death Gun, Police Say

Oklahoma City, Feb. 13 (AP).—Buck Herring, 34, died here today of gunshot wounds police said were inflicted by Mrs. Opal Herring, his 29-year-old wife, who pawned her wedding ring to buy the gun. Officers said Mrs. Herring related that she shot her husband after a series of quarrels.

in the President's attitude. If the President has changed his stand the alternative is expected to place this country in a naval building race, perhaps the greatest in history.

Discussing the President's $800,000,000 naval expansion pogram Admiral Woodward said:

"As to the question of finance let us not weaken our security by any false ideas of economy. Money thus wisely spent may prevent our being embroiled in another major conflict.

"The very existence of a strong-armed force not only prevents attack upon vital interests but also acts as a deterrent to war by impressing potential enemies who rely on armed force themselves. Military empires to the east and west, with complete impunity, have engaged in banditry and piracy on a grand scale, treating all protests with contemptuous defiance."

Admiral Woodward warned against "paid professional propagandists" who would "sabotage our national defense." He suggested "full trust in the reasoned judgment of the responsible military and naval advisers who have spent their lives studying and practicing their profession, rather than listening to those vapid outpourings.

"The idea that the possession of a large efficient navy leads to war is nothing more than 'eye-wash' of the arm-chair pacifists and is so idiotic that it does not even merit rebuttal," the admiral concluded.

Senator King discussing his resolution said:

"I want to see every nation interested in this proposal come to Washington and put its cards on the table in an effort to dispel the atmosphere of fear and to end the terrible burden of armaments.

"I want to see all branches of the major nations' armed services discussed without previous commitments. If the nations of the world want peace, this is the way to give them an opportunity to get it," he concluded.

Representatives Maverick said: A conference now regardless of how irritated nations might be may save a war."

"Let's have some peace talk and a peace conference before a war and not later," he continued. "In fact, if we do this, we may stop a naval race and eventually a war.

"The Japanese reply to the United States was not belligerent and it was quite eveident that their government is willing to discuss naval limitation.

"Japan also pointed out in her note that she proposed at the London conference the abolition of capital ships. Who, then, wants them? We should thrash this out over a conference table with the other powers and make a real contribution to peace."

There are many Senators and Representatives, it is known, who do not share King's and Maverick's views on such a conference. Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is one. He said the present world situation is less favorable for a successful conclusion to such a conference than upon many previous occasions.

"Since political antagonisms are greater than ever before, I doubt that a conference would be successful," he stated.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, said yesterday he would support the Administration program for increased naval armaments if he became convinced that "it would be for the use of the United States alone."

The Idahoan declared he was for an "efficient navy" but would oppose any appropriation he felt was designed primarily to make the navy available to carry out any understanding for joint operations with any other power.

Borah said he regarded it as "unfortunate" that high English officials had made statements that "gave the world to understand that the United States and Great Britain had a working alliance."

The resolutions for a naval limitation meeting were regarded as certain to elicit further demands in both Houses for greater clarification of the Administration's foreign policy. Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), California, predicted "developments" soon might disclose there had been some conversations between American and British officials over possible joint use of the navies of the two countries if a crisis arises.

He said he believed Secretary of State Hull acted "in good faith" when he denied any understanding existed but hinted he believed other officials might have entered into such conversations without the Secretary of State's knowledge.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, scoffed at the idea of a secret agreement. "I don't think there's a thing to it," he said.

Representative George H. Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, in a prepared statement yesterday asserted that "every day brings the United States nearer to a war with Japan as planned by Great Britain to further British interests."

He declared the "open door" policy in China as declared by Secretary of State John Hay was dictated by Great Britain and that "the present threat of war with Japan is the result of the policy then adopted."

Representative Carl Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, reiterated yesterday his statement that the size of warships is a matter of engineering and not of legislation.

vious visits the thief removed a glass panel from the front door, but this time, balked by a wooden panel, he borrowed the janitor's ladder and crawled through the transom.

Pratt said the man's depredations had cost his firm $200 so far.

May Holman, 38, of 725 Harvard street northwest, told police that a colored man attempted to attack her about 2 a. m. in the 3200 block of Georgia avenue northwest. The man, she said, forced her to the porch of a vacant house, struck her in the face and knocked her down. She screamed and Harvey Kesnaf, 3118 Georgia avenue, answered. Her assailant fled.

Miss Holman was uninjured and was able to describe the man to police.

Boldest of the week-end holdups was one about 4 p. m. yesterday. An unarmed colored man robbed a High Ice Cream store at 1538 North Capitol street of an undetermined amount of money.

Mrs. Elsie Fitzpatrick, attendant at the store, said the man asked for an ice cream cone and, when she turned her back, grabbed the contents of the cash register.

David Lassitor, manager of a filling station at Twenty-second and P street northwest, fired two shots at the getaway car used by a colored man who robbed the station at 6 a. m, getting a small amount of change.

Ann M. Preisinger, a nurse at Walter Reed Hospital, was robbed of a suitcase of clothing and $2.90 early yesterday by three colored men at Mount Pleasant street and Park road northwest, where she was waiting for a street car.

Two taxicab drivers were victims of holdup men. Miles Gosnell, 912 M street southeast, lost $4 when two colored men threatened him with a knife at Delaware avenue and P street southwest.

An armed colored man took $10.40 from Malcolm F. Crockett, 120 Third street southeast, at South Capitol and O streets.

Meanwhile, Charles Clements, colored, 30, of 44 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was under armed guard in Providence Hospital suffering bullet wounds in his head and back received Saturday night when he attempted to rob the liquor store of Adam Luber at 1001 New Jersey avenue southeast. Luber and a colored clerk, Thomas Belt, both shot Clements.

Purse snatchers gained a few pennies more than $2 in two operations. Elsa Turunen, of 3501 Newark street northwest, reported loss of her pocketbook, $2, a watch and personal papers to a youth at Kalorama Circle. Eva Ellington, of 1717 P street northwest, reported theft of her pocketbook containing a few cents change and a bankbook.

Tear Gas Kills Baby as Police Fight Strikers

C. I. O. Asks Gov. Allred for More Rangers in Walkout of 5,000.

By the United Press.

The Committee for Industrial Organization last night asked Gov. James V. Allred of Texas for additional rangers "to protect our people against local police violence" in a strike of 5,000 pecan shellers near San Antonio.

The demand came after the C. I. O. said it had been advised of the death in the strike area of a 5-month-old baby from tear gas, and that San Antonio strike leaders feared "another police attack on the picket lines" today.

At the same time the Mexican Embassy disclosed that "all but a few" of 65 Mexican pecan workers arrested by police during the strike were released after the State Department had interceded.

Before leaving Washington, Allred said two of the famed rangers already have been sent to San Antonio and that Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul, chief executive in Allred's absence, "will do whatever is necessary" if more are needed.

"I have been advised," Allred said, "that the Texas Industrial Commission will begin a hearing in San Antonio tomorrow and investigate the strike from top to bottom, the economic causes, and whether any civil liberties have been violated."

C. I. O. officials said the strike began after employers threatened a 20 per cent cut in wages, now said to range from $1.45 to $2.02 per week.

Sen. Lodge Plans Law to 'Correct' Social Security

Worcester, Mass., Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., (Republican), Massachusetts, said tonight he soon would introduce legislation to make the Social Security Act "more workable and safe" and end use of contributions for Government expenses.

Lodge outlined his plan to 1,400 persons attending the Worcester G. O. P. victory dinner, after attacking new deal measures, including the Federal housing bill, the neutrality act and relief methods.

He declared, "I favor a real old age pension scheme which not only provides a proper pension, but actually will find money in the bank when the time comes to make a payment. I contend that when set aside money in payroll taxes to take care of their old age, this money should not be used to pay general expenses of Government, but should be nailed down."

Heart to Be Topic For G. W. Clinic

Heart disease, leading cause of death in the United States, will be the subject of a symposium at the morning session of the post-graduate clinic of the George Washington medical school Saturday.

The afternoon session will hear papers on emergency surgery, treatment of functional and organic psychoses and new therapeutic agents.

Dr. Alton Ochner, professor of surgery at Tulane University, will give the guest address at the twelfth annual banquet of the University Medical Society, at the Raleigh Hotel at 7:30 p. m.

Parent-Teacher Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School Parent-Teacher Association will be held February 18 at 8 p. m., instead of February 21, it was announced yesterday. Under the direction of C. Foster, program chairman, a spelling bee and information contest will be held following the meeting.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Lead-Directing Bids.

Many players seem to have the quaint idea that unless they bid and thereby tell their partner what suit to lead, the partner is apt to make a calamitous opening lead. I do not hold with this theory. From my experience I believe that just as many bad opening leads are made after partner has shown the way as in the absence of any defensive bidding whatever. Today's hand, taken from a recent duplicate, illustrates my point.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A Q J 7 8 ♡ 9 ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ A Q 8 7
♠ K 6 ♡ A 4 2 ◇ A J 7 4 3 ♣ 10 9 6	North West East South	♠ 8 5 2 ♡ K J 10 8 7 ◇ K 6 5 ♣ 4 2
	♠ 10 9 4 ♡ Q 6 5 3 ◇ Q 9 ♣ K J 5 3

At every table, North became the declarer at spade contracts ranging from two to four. The bidding in all cases started with a spade by North, a pass by East, and a notrump by South. At several tables West overcalled with two diamonds, and from that point, whether or not four spades were reached, North and South were assured of a good match-point score, because East invariably laid down the diamond King as his opening lead. After that, nothing could prevent declarer from ruffing his third diamond in the dummy and this, with the successful spade finesse, gave North-South ten tricks.

Only at the two tables where East was left to make his own selection of opening lead were the spade contracts held to nine tricks. With no "guiding" bid from West, both of these Easts selected the club four as the safest and most constructive lead. Now, it was the declarer who was helpless. If he tried to take out dummy's diamonds in order to ruff the third round, East could jump up with the diamond King and lead another club. West, on winning the lead with the diamond Ace, had merely to return a third club in order to give East a ruff. On the other hand, if declarer drew the outstanding trumps to prevent a club ruff, he would eventually have to lose three diamonds instead of two.

I do not maintain that certain lead-directing bids, where the bidder holds something like Ace-King-Queen or Ace-King-Jack, are inadvisable, but in a hand such as West's I do maintain that he is in no position to decide which lead will have the best result.

$103,000 Fund Held Necessary For Symphony

Association to Disband if Sum Is Not Raised, Strong Says.

A minimum sustaining fund of $103,000 must be raised between February 23 and March 6 for the National Symphony Orchestra's 1938-39 season, L. Corrin Strong, chairman of the orchestra association, announced yesterday.

If the sum is not raised, Strong said, all contributions will be returned, all pledges canceled and the orchestra association disbanded.

"Our board members," he said, "are deep in their conviction that if the people of Washington cannot give sufficient financial support to provide music of the highest standard, the present association should not continue with sponsorship of the orchestra."

"Under the inspired direction of Dr. Hans Kindler" the Washington musicians are now in "the front ranks of major symphony orchestras in this country," he said.

The budget for next season has been set at $172,000, of which $50,000 is raised through sale of tickets and $16,000 through concerts given outside Washington.

First Lady to Talk To Youth Council

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Ever since Andy Jackson swept the Federal offices clean of his political opponents, the friends of civil service have been plagued by the alluring words, "to the victor belong the spoils." The slogan rolls smoothly off the lips, and many a political bigwig has found its fascination irresistible . . . To counteract the damaging effect of this triumphant watchword of the spoilsmen, Charles G. Morris, of New Haven, Conn., offers a $50 reward for the best slogan in aggressive defense of the merit system. The only specifications (or, if you prefer, hints) are that the victorious motto must be "in positive rather than in negative terms; must be 'snappy' and must convey a complete idea." Open to all American citizens, the contest closes on April 25. Slogans are receivable at the National Civil Service Reform League, 521 Fifth avenue, New York City . . . Need we add that Mr. Morris is on the executive committee of the N. C. S. R. L. and is vice president of the Connecticut Merit System Association?

The Forest Service recently lost a veteran who had spent more than 34 years in public employment. "We, his associates, admire him for the things which he has accomplished, but, above all else, we love him as a friend and wish for him complete recovery of health and years of happy life ahead" was one of the many tributes paid Paul Goodwin Redington, former chief of the Biological Survey, on the occasion of his retirement . . . A graduate of Dartmouth and Yale, Redington became student assistant in the Bureau of Forestry July 1, 1903, under the leadership of Gifford Pinchot, one of the most famous of American conservationists. Redington's rise was rapid: he was forest assistant in 1904; forest inspector, 1906; assistant district forester, Rocky Mountain region, 1908, and associate district forester, 1910; forest supervisor of the Sierra National Forest, 1911, and of the Sequoia National Forest, 1916; district forester of the Southwestern region, 1916-1919; district forester, California region, 1919-1926; chief of public relations, Washington office, 1926; chief of the Biological Survey, 1927-1934; back to the Washington office of the Forest Service from March, 1934, to his retirement, with the exception of a year's activity as supervisor of the Shoshone National Forest . . . In the midst of all this, Redington found time for a few months in 1918 to be city manager of Albuquerque, N. Mex. . . . A native of Chicago, he lives in Falls Church, Va.

The first free show of the Union Playhouse, to be presented Thursday in the Agriculture Department auditorium, will consist of three films: "The Building of Boulder Dam" (Interior Department), and "Flood Weather" and "Stop Forest Fires" (Agriculture). Dr. Bauer and the Agriculture Orchestra will play and there will be three acts of entertainment. The whole program is under the auspices of Agriculture Branch, Local No. 2, N. F. F. E. Remember, the show is free. Lee H. Shugar is director of the Playhouse.

Speaking of N. F. F. E., the popularity contest of Local No. 262 (Treasury), is arousing keen interest. President leader of the 24 candidates is Mattie E. Clements, Register's Office, followed by her colleague, Rose M. Spencer, with Nellie Flather, Loans and Currency, and Auta A. Santos, Loans and Currency, 119 D street northeast, runners-up . . . The contest ends March 1 and the winners will receive two free trips to New York City.

Again on the subject of N. F. F. E., meetings for the week are scheduled as follows: Today—Commerce Department Branch, Local No. 2, 4:15 p. m.; Treasury Department, Local No. 262, 8 p. m. Tomorrow—Civil Service Commission, Branch Local No. 2, noon; General Accounting Office, Branch Local No. 2, 8 p. m. Wednesday—Exec. Co., Veterans' Administration, Branch Local No. 2, 4:30 p. m.; District Federation of Federal Employe Unions, 8 p. m. Friday—Bureau of Standards, Local No. 260, 4:45 p. m., and Executive Council, Local No. 2, 5 p. m.

St. Valentine's Day will be appropriately observed tonight by Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, American Federation of Government Employes, who are giving a dance and card party at 2400 Sixteenth street from 9 to 1 . . . Meyer Goldman's Orchestra will play.

For the more serious-minded, Lucille Foster McMillin, United States Civil Service Commissioner, will speak at the Women's City Club press dinner, to be held at 6:30 this evening at the clubhouse, 736 Jackson place.

We see that Secretary Wallace has approved an order doubling the size of the Columbia Gorge recreation area in Mount Hood National Forest, adjacent to the Columbia River highway—one of the many "most beautiful" areas of the Far West. The Forest Service promises that the area will be "maintained in its natural state," subject only to such development as will make it "of maximum free use and enjoyment to the general public." Nature lovers will hope that the area is kept as wild as possible.

Up To The Community.

Two current developments illustrate the magnitude of Washington's law enforcement problem. One is the active concern of such officials as Attorney General Cummings and Senator King over the District's "disgraceful" crime record. Another is the fact that the Criminal Justice Association has outlined 27 specific studies and law enforcement projects which demand early attention.

In a large measure law enforcement in Washington is at present a Federal responsibility. Both the courts and the district attorney's office are under Federal jurisdiction. When Mr. Cummings expresses "disgust" over the neglect of crime in the Capital City, therefore, he is not merely showing his sympathy for a disfranchised community. He is entering an official protest as the head of a most vital branch of the District's law enforcement machinery.

If current official efforts are supplemented by an effective community drive against crime, Congress will soon or late come to recognize the need for more police, more prosecutors, more judges and more parole supervisors. Fortunately, the public interest in the problem is being promoted in a scientific manner by the Criminal Justice Association. Although still in the developmental stage, that agency has already made its influence felt. It has developed a public awareness of the appalling cost of crime and has laid the groundwork for a comprehensive tightening up of law enforcement all down the line.

Highway Dreams.

No single solution for the unemployment problem has been suggested more often in letters to The Post than the construction of a national system of "super-highways." The lasting value of such projects is generally stressed, as well as the point that the work could be expanded or diminished as depression or prosperity might demand.

Wholly aside from relief considerations, however, the proposal has other appeals. Motorists who have experienced the advantages of the occasional four-lane, protected highways now in use would like more. Insurance companies, too, would join with the general public in applauding the safety of a modern highway system. Cement and construction machinery interests could also be expected to give their approval, though for less altruistic reasons. Finally, military experts would welcome the direct overland connection of all parts of the country.

This last aspect of the proposal, indeed, when coupled with the relief possibilities, gives it a faint Nazi-Fascist aroma. Unquestionably oblivious to this, however, are two Senators who have recently taken the idea under serious consideration. Senator Lonergan is primarily interested in automobile safety; he recommends development of express toll highways between and around busy areas of the country. Senator Bulkley is apparently interested in the plan mainly as a pump-priming device; he visualizes the continent spanned by three east-west and six north-south highways, all likewise to be paid for and maintained by tolls.

The Ohio legislator estimates his program would cost some $8,000,000,000. The Lonergan plan, being less comprehensive, would probably be less expensive. Both would be largely predicated on two assumptions that have yet to be proved: That the average daily traffic load on existing through highways justifies construction of almost parallel routes and that the increased safety and convenience of "superhighways" would elicit sufficient tolls to make the undertakings self-liquidating.

These two fundamental questions are now under study by highway experts. Until they are fully answered, neither plan can be justified on the basis of defense needs, highway safety or unemployment relief.

Unfortunate Omission.

A small but important omission has been detected in the District appropriation bill. Probably through an inadvertence an item of $800 requested by the Health Department has been passed over. Without it, the new District law to combat infant blindness will be pointless.

Last spring the District health officer was empowered by Congress to require that silver nitrate be administered to the eyes of all new-born babies. The drug is a specific for ophthalmia neonatorum, an infection known as a major cause of blindness. Its application has long been part of most obstetrical routines even in Washington where it has not been compulsory. The point of the law is to guarantee its use in every birth in the city. Mere law, however, is not enough. Certain families cannot afford to buy the drug. It was to provide free ampules in such cases that the $800 was requested by the Health Department.

Virtually every community of the country offers such a service. The practice is dictated not only by humanitarian considerations; economy, too, is served. Washington, for example, spends a considerable sum annually to support its blind citizens. By spending an additional $800 on silver nitrate, the proportion of blind pensions to be paid in the future is certain to be appreciably reduced.

Who Finances Work Relief?

With the addition of the $250,000,000 requested for work relief, the estimated deficit for the current fiscal year is expected to rise to at least $1,300,000,000. If revenue returns should fall below the recently revised estimates, the deficit will probably go still higher. It is doubtful whether many people realize to what extent the relief payments which unbalance the budget are actually borne by the employer and employe groups contributing to various pension funds established to relieve old age and provide compensation for unemployed workers.

The arguments in favor of keeping work-relief outlays to a minimum consistent with alleviation of real distress are strengthened by a survey of the sources of cash income available for Treasury use. At present the Government is deriving large revenues from social security taxes, from taxes on railways and their employes levied to provide retirement pensions, and from payments into the unemployment trust fund built up by the States from pay-roll taxes.

For instance, the President estimated in his budget message that the social security taxes collected from employer and employe pay-roll contributions would amount to $571,000,000 during the present fiscal year. The return from taxes on carriers and their employes was placed at $150,000,000, while the unemployment trust fund was expected to provide about $653,000,000 additional to be invested in Government securities.

The Government sets up reserve funds on behalf of these insured groups, the assets consisting solely of its own promises to pay. During the current year estimates indicate that approximately $1,196,000,000 will be available for such investments—an amount somewhat smaller than the actual cash receipts from pay-roll taxes levied under the various insurance plans.

Two facts are worth noting in this budgetary picture: The taxed employers and employes are now contributing most of the cash required to meet Federal work-relief costs. Furthermore, because of the existence of the insurance reserves, the anticipated deficit of $1,300,000,000 in the Federal budget will be almost entirely financed by sale of Government securities to the insurance funds. Of course, present estimates may be subject to some correction, since withdrawals from the unemployment insurance trust fund may be larger than was anticipated. In case of old-age pensions, however, regular benefit payments do not begin for some years.

Hence the Treasury is able to finance its extraordinary expenditures for relief without having to borrow large sums in the open market. Secretary Morgenthau has already said that the additional relief demands would not necessitate any immediate new financing operations. The current unbalanced state of the budget should not, therefore, arouse fears of inflationary deficit financing because actual cash receipts at the disposal of the Treasury are almost equal to the amount of expenditures.

The comparative ease of the financing task, indeed, is one of the really serious impediments to vigorous efforts to reduce work-relief outlays. If current contributions to social security insurance funds were offset by current payments to insured aged and unemployed workers, the Federal Government would have to face squarely the question of financing work-relief outlays either by heavy tax increases or additional borrowing in the open market. As matters stand, it can use the cash from the pay-roll taxes to meet general expenditures and hence is indisposed to consider changes that would reduce the burden imposed upon industry by these taxes.

A Real Opposition Needed.

On the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday a number of leading Republicans openly invited the support of so-called Jeffersonian Democrats in organizing to oppose Administration candidates at the polls.

Senator Vandenberg was particularly emphatic in urging the need for a realignment of the two dominant parties, asserting that "revolutionary movements, at home quite as much as abroad, have upset and all but obliterated normal, habitual partisan alignments during the last few years." Should it become necessary to the preservation of what he calls the American system, Mr. Vandenberg declared his willingness to sacrifice the identity of the Republican Party on the altar of an effective opposition.

That an outstanding party leader like Senator Vandenberg regards an articulate, united and purposeful opposition as more important than the maintenance of party labels is an encouraging development. Yet it does not seem at all likely that familiar party designations will soon be abandoned, even though they have long since ceased to be identified with any well defined body of political beliefs. However, if the name "Republican" is to serve as an effective rallying point for voters opposed to the policies of this Administration, it must be given more content and new meaning.

In making invidious comparisons between the American system of free enterprise and the bureaucrat-ridden collectivist regime toward which he thinks we are hastening, Senator Vandenberg displayed the finished technique of the skilled partisan orator. The American system, as he calls it, is not capable of such sharp definition as he suggests. Nor is the choice between economic freedom and collectivism as clean-cut as he assumes. However, these are pardonable exaggerations in a party address whose purpose it was to call attention to dangerous political trends in the direction of economic collectivism accompanied by increasing concentration of political power in the Federal Executive.

To offer intelligent opposition to such trends, they must be recognized beneath the various disguises in which they appear. But in addition to being alert in detection an opposition party to be effective must, as Senator Vandenberg warns, avoid being reactionary or static in its outlook. Instead, it must, as he says, "persistently progress within itself, aiming always at the maximums of mass advantage and mass security."

Of course, within the limits of such generalizations there is room for considerable disagreement regarding specific items of a party program. There is, however, also greater opportunity for creating a broad, constructive opposition even if the Jeffersonian Democrats refuse to be lured from their traditional party allegiance.

Without a constructive and influential opposition, democratic institutions soon wither and die. Consequently all those who believe in the American system of representative government regardless of their partisan affiliations should welcome the emergence of an intelligent, discriminating opposition to the party in power, with a positive program of its own to guide its critical judgments.

Schuschnigg Sees Hitler.

It is of more than passing interest that the first foreign statesman to see Chancellor Hitler since the army crisis came to a head in the Third Reich was Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria.

Precisely what took place at Saturday's meeting between the German and Austrian leaders has not yet been revealed. But there appears to be some justification for the belief that Schuschnigg returned to Vienna with a new pledge by Hitler to respect Austria's independence. Certainly the alternative theory, that the Austrian chancellor had gone to Berchtesgaden to place his nation in the Fuehrer's lap, cannot for a moment be credited.

Ever since he took the reins of power from the dying hands of the late Engelbert Dollfuss, Schuschnigg has steadfastly continued the latter's policy of resisting every effort to nazify Austria and incorporate that country in the Third Reich. The developments of the past fortnight have strengthened his hand in this particular.

To be sure, the replacement of Neurath by Ribbentrop as German foreign minister may ultimately lead to a more ambitious foreign policy by the Third Reich. And the presumption remains that, now as heretofore, Hitler would like to see Germany enlarged by the inclusion of Austria, his homeland. Both for internal and external reasons, however, the present moment is far from propitious for a Nazi thrust in the direction of Austria.

The fact is not being lost sight of in Berlin that close on the heels of the German army crisis Great Britain and Italy began, once more, to draw together. One motive for this has probably been Italy's fear that the shakeup in Germany may lead to a new Nazi attempt to swallow Austria, the indispensable buffer between the partners of the Berlin-Rome axis. To preserve the entente between the Fascist dictators, therefore, Hitler must again pledge himself to keep his hands off Austria. Moreover, the overthrow of the Goga government in Rumania has meant the elimination of the most ardently pro-Nazi regime ever to hold office in Carol's kingdom. This has tended to destroy the optimistic belief in certain Nazi quarters that the tide was irresistibly moving in their direction.

In the meantime Hitler's drastic shake-up of the Reichswehr's high command has apparently left scars at home which may take some time to heal. For this reason, too, discretion on the part of Hitler in pursuing his Austrian policy is called for.

An Austro-German rapprochement would make possible the continuation of the Berlin-Rome axis. It would also make Italy less anxious to court Great Britain, ease the fears of the moderates in Germany that a radical Nazi policy in foreign affairs is about to be put into force, help those elements in Great Britain seeking an Anglo-German rapprochement. Generally speaking it would reduce tensions in Europe that were heightened by the shake-up in the recent German government and army.

It isn't hard to live on a small salary if you don't spend too much trying to keep it a secret.

Take The Window Displays Out.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

We are thoroughly in sympathy with the effort being made by P. A. Tate, superintendent of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League, to obtain enforcement of the State regulation forbidding liquor displays in saloon windows. In fact, we agree with Mr. Tate just as heartily on this point as we disagreed with him in his attitude against repeal.

The law against displaying liquor and certain types of liquor advertising in show windows is sensible, salutary and quite specific. Compliance with it may be regarded as a test of the retailer's willingness to obey other laws and regulations which have been set up to prevent abuses in the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Many dealers comply with the law voluntarily. State and local authorities, charged equally with enforcement of the law, should show no leniency to violators.

To End Charity Rackets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I express my sincere appreciation of the series of articles by Mr. H. W. Donovan exposing the "Charity Racket" operating in the District.

During the year innumerable questions come to us at the Community Chest office as to the integrity of the organizations which are soliciting funds by telephone, by house-to-house canvass, by letter of appeals, and by benefits of one sort or another. It is therefore evident that many people who want to be generous want also to be intelligent in their giving. But the Community Chest cannot possibly obtain the sort of factual information that should be available to contributors, and the less reputable the soliciting organization, the less likely we should be to have information or advice for inquirers.

We have therefore felt that it would be highly desirable if there could be created in the District an indorsement committee or a licensing committee which would have the responsibility of investigating the activities of all organizations, however small, which solicit contributions; would have the right to insist upon periodic audits of the accounts of such agencies; and could without fear or bias tell contributors which ones were worthy of their support. Very evidently such a committee would have a task demanding time and knowledge and its study of the work of organizations which now have little or no supervision, although they may have boards of "sponsors," would be roughly comparable to the responsibility of the budget committee of the Community Chest to know the activities of the organizations which are members of the Chest.

I hope that this series of articles will open the eyes of many people who are being duped at the present time and are lining the pockets of one of the lowest types of racketeers, and that this may be a definite step toward the creation of a means of protecting generous folk and enabling them to use their philanthropic gifts for only enterprises which deserve their support.

The Lincoln Brigade Veterans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The 60 veterans of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade who were here over February 12 and 13, to pay their respects to Abraham Lincoln, did not, as "F. T. E." suggests, run out on their 3,000 comrades-in-arms still in Spain fighting for the loyalist government.

They returned, in almost every case, because they were badly wounded in action and were honorably discharged from the Lincoln Brigade. A few are here because those still in Spain felt it important that some return for the express purpose of informing Americans why 3,000 of them went to Spain to fight in the civil war.

The adventure never got stale, because it was never, as far as these 3,000 are concerned, an adventure. They went because they believe in the importance of fighting fascism where the battle is hottest—in Spain. No soldiers of fortune are they. They received the same pay given to Spanish soldiers in the Spanish People's Army.

As the veterans see it, the Spanish government is no more Communist than the New Deal. It represents that government that for the first time has given Spain a voice in its own affairs, that has given a semi-literate country schools, that has given a landless peasantry land and has for the first time made an attack on the feudalism which has paralyzed Spain since the sixteenth century. It has been invaded by the most vicious warmongers of Europe. These Fascist dictators must be stopped at any cost, say the veterans and I, if democracy in Europe and ultimately in the United States too, is to be preserved. And "F. T. E." will agree that that democracy is something worth fighting for.

Unemployment Relief.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am offering a five-point program for the alleviation of unemployment:

1. The Government should take the initiative and see that every capable and willing man is given a job. Men should replace married women who are employed as file clerks or performing simple routine work. Single girls between the ages of 18 and 25 should take the positions occupied by married women stenographers. Let industry follow suit, and if necessary place the man behind the counter selling ribbons and lace (if need be) in order to remove a married woman. When these men are in their places and the women in their homes again, breaking, wearing out and replacing things in the household, we will see the wheels of commerce move forward.

2. Discharge all men and women who are receiving retirement money and are at the same time employed elsewhere and thereby depriving a needy wage earner from a living.

3. Eliminate all night work as far as possible and do not employ anyone who is regularly employed to do extra work.

4. Reduce the speed of manufacturing in industry. A man knowing that the company has an order which will keep him occupied for only one month will not spend any of his earnings freely, but if this man's work is extended over a period of a month or more he may spend more freely. In other words, he feels secure in that job for a time, whereas rush jobs are spasmodic and insecure.

5. A five-day week should be established and pay accordingly. Any one performing any work for compensation on the sixth day or offday should be subject to a fine.

Re-employment Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If re-employment be the solution of the Nation's problem, why not in some way empower the President to attain that end by co-operating with industry to the extent of returning the unemployed to their erstwhile jobs with a guarantee that if employment thus increased does not directly and coordinately increase general consumption sufficiently to make both ends meet, the deficits will be met by Government aid?

This assistance may be by subsidy or by loans, but in either case is it not better than the dole which is disguised as public work and piles up an enormous debt?

Thus, instead of allocating the millions of dollars required for relief to the WPA, which seems to be the Administration's only way out of the dilemma, they should be held as a sinking fund to be used in the event of unprofitable results.

Relief rolls would thereby be automatically diminished at once and eventually obliterated and the unemployed put at work for which they have been trained with the concomitant creation of useful and necessary products.

As there will always be a certain percentage of unemployed, their relief should also be provided for through State and municipal religious and charitable organizations, which are familiar with local conditions and would exercise judicious as well as generous supervision over the distribution of funds so as to help the needy who are incapacitated and deserving and send the worthless derelicts to the workhouse or the poor farm where they should be compelled to earn their keep.

Constitutional or other obstacles in the way of this plan could be removed by Congressional enactment in the manner that any disaster is met by emergency legislation.

SAMUEL WALTER TAYLOR.

To Enfranchise The District.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For years the people of Washington have fought for self-government and national representation. But although practically every civic organization has indorsed this campaign, we are still disfranchised. Washington must be given a program to follow that will not only show them how to get suffrage, but what it will mean to the city and in such a way that every Washingtonian will actively participate in such a campaign. The following plan is suggested:

A bill should be introduced in Congress that would

(A) Grant local suffrage to the District of Columbia.

(B) Order the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to appoint a committee whose duty shall be to order an election of delegates to a constitutional convention. The delegates shall be elected on the basis of three from each police precinct, using said precincts as wards, plus 12 from the city as a whole. The convention shall be called for the purpose of:

(a) To draft a constitution or charter for the City of Washington.
(b) To work out a detailed plan of administrative government for the city.
(c) To work out the fiscal relations between the Federal and the local governments.
(d) To work out a detailed plan for a ward system, based on the population.
(e) To propose what public officers should be elected, and which should be appointed, and if so, by whom.
(f) To draft a plan of representation for Washington in Congress.
(g) To instruct the election committee to conduct a referendum on the proposals of the convention.

If the referendum favors the convention proposals, the proposals should be presented to Congress for approval. When passed by the referendum and approved by Congress, the convention delegates should convene and set a date for the election of the public officer of the government of the City of Washington.

"False Economy."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Taking money from industrious persons who have earned it by the sweat of their brows and giving it to those who cannot work or produce anything, is false economy.

Those in the upper class are not much for eats, but they do indulge lavishly in durable goods, such as wearing apparel, shelter, etc., which provide employment for those who are able and willing to work. Those who are unable to work live only on what nature provides. They produce nothing and provide no employment for anyone—not even themselves—but depend upon charity, directly from the two upper classes when they are prosperous.

The dog is a most industrious creature, and it would appear that the one-third in the lower class have him by the tail and interfere with his activities without any material benefit to themselves or the other two-thirds in the upper classes. Let him loose.

Agrees With Phillips.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you profusely for Phillips' "Once Over" entitled "The Specialist" in The Post of February 11. If the modern doctor wants to know what a lot of us have against him, that tells it. He is analyzing us to death.

My experience is that a doctor who has no opinions whatever about you after an office examination has few that are worth anything after a long-drawn-out laboratory picturing and probing of one's purse and "plumbing."

The Post Impressionist

The Smile.

ELIZABETH plunged her hands into the bubbling suds of the dishpan. Angry thoughts scudded across her mind like storm clouds as she twisted the dish mop in and out of the tumblers, rinsed them hastily under the steaming hot-water tap and set them in a row to drain.

They're standing in line outside the movie theater now, she thought. In line with all the other Babbitts who have nothing better to do on a Sunday night than giggle at Joe Penner. Why it was that they looked forward all week to Sunday she could not imagine. Morning: read the papers; afternoon: sleep; evening: go to the movies. And between times, eat, eat, eat! Hence the preposterous stack of dishes she was left with.

"And how are you, Ida?" she could hear her mother cry across the theater lobby to one of the bridge club set. "Yes, I've heard it's a marvelous show . . . Our daughter? Oh yes; Elizabeth. I think Elizabeth is home, washing the dishes.

She shoved the silver from the kitchen table into the pan with one violent gesture. The knives and forks cut gashes in the suds, then settled to the bottom with a muffled clatter. "Lucky somebody is home, washing the dishes," she muttered to herself.

The hot water already had reduced the skin of her hands to a mass of pink wrinkles. She winced as she felt the prongs of a fork catch and tear a softened finger nail. Would she never be given a chance to take care of her appearance? She conjured up a picture of Miss Donnelly, her Latin teacher—Miss Donnelly, whose hands were like lilies and whose long pointed nails glistened jewel-like in all the splendor of their framboise polish.

With a grimace she tackled the unpleasant job of scraping the plates. At this rate she would have no time to do the last ten lines of that Caesar translation. "I'm sorry, Miss Donnelly, but the family all went out last night and I had to do the dishes. I'll finish it up after school and recite it to you before I go."

She rehearsed the speech mentally until she achieved the desired tone of brave wistfulness. Miss Donnelly would understand. Next week she meant to get up enough courage to ask Miss Donnelly where she had her hair fixed. Not that it would do any good, she remembered bitterly as she tucked a troublesome brown lock behind her ear with a soapy hand. She'd probably have to attain her majority before her mother would consent to a permanent wave.

Snatching a dish towel from the rack, she viciously massaged the first handful of silver. She always started on the silver because it shone so when it was dried properly. Neither her mother nor that lazy part-time maid ever bothered to do it right, she reflected. As she placed the pieces in the sideboard drawer, she rearranged its contents, lining up the spoons so that the handle of one adjoined the bowl of the next. Satisfied with the neat pattern on the purple felt lining of the drawer, she returned to the kitchen and started on the tumblers.

Marian probably would telephone her any minute. "Sorry, Marian," she heard herself telling her friend, "but the family has left me with a terrific pile of dishes and I won't be through for ages. You'd better go bicycling without me." Of course, she had nearly finished the dishes now. But her bicycle had a flat, and she knew that she would be too weary even to think of pumping it up. And with the family away, maybe she would be able to finish the last hundred pages of "Vanity Fair" in peace. Why was it, she asked herself, that the sight of her curled up over "Vanity Fair" invariably prompted her father either to turn on a particularly insipid radio program or to tease her about growing up to be a librarian?

After hanging up the dishpan and scrubbing the sink, she reached for the broom. Dirt in all the corners! Her mother should have fired that good-for-nothing girl long ago. Nobody but she herself seemed to care how things looked. She made a final survey of the kitchen. Everything in place, towels folded over the rack, plates and tumblers glistening with cleanliness. She tucked "Vanity Fair" under her arm and went upstairs.

* * * *

It was a struggle to keep awake until her parents' return nearly two hours later. She strained her ears for the sound of tires on the driveway, the click of the key in the front door and then her mother's cry of surprise.

"Charles!" she called to her husband, who was on his way in from the garage. "That child's done all the dishes again! I told her distinctly that she should come with us and not bother because the girl is going to clean the entire kitchen tomorrow."

Elizabeth turned over on her side. By the time her mother had climbed the stairs and cautiously opened the bedroom door, she was asleep. But she had neglected to remove from her face the faintly complacent smile peculiar to martyrs.

JEAN BROWNELL.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Mr. Chicago Himself.

Chicago.

MANY an earnest and learned brow has puckered in solemn study of the state of mind which is Chicago and failed to express the political philosophy of the people as well as Frank Zintak stated it during his trial on a charge of embezzling $10,500 of public funds.

PEGLER.

Mr. Zintak is a typical Chicago public official, a minor politician who became clerk of the Superior Court.

In the course of the trial the following dialogue occurred:—

Question—"Whose check was that?"

Answer (by Mr. Zintak)—"That's what I say if you would only let this go until tomorrow there would be nothing to it, because here's the idea, even if it is on record, you are stirring up something that probably will be worse in the political line than anything, because I represent the largest group of people in Chicago.

"They have all the faith in the world in me for things I done squarely, because there was not anything we done in politics that we did not do it in accord with what those people wished. Some of the people may think there shouldn't be something like groups, but there will be Polish groups and maybe others as long as we exist; for the simple reason that fraternal organizations they encourage youth to belong to them, and the only way they can do that is by keeping that spirit up, because they are insurance groups and they would diminish if they did not."

MR. ZINTAK was vindicated and made restitution, and public opinion has held him blameless, because the community was absolutely convinced by the defense that he did not take the money for himself, but gave it to charities and advanced it to other politicians, including at least one judge. Afterward there was a bit of a scandal over the fact that some of the jurors, when they were taken out for the air at night in custody of court officers, were entertained in night clubs, where the attractions included liquor, dancing and slot machines.

But the community bears Mr. Zintak no ill-will, and his conduct in a position of public trust is not popularly deplored, because the morality and mentality of the city as a whole are the morality and mentality of Mr. Zintak. He is not only typical of the public service but typical of the city as well. He is Mr. Chicago himself, and he doubtless would have been stunned by a verdict of guilty—the more so after the vindication of Gov. Len Small, who organized a dummy bank to facilitate his retention of the interest on public funds intrusted to him, and of Robert M. Sweitzer, the county clerk who admitted a shortage of $350,000.

The amount of interest involved in Gov. Small's case was estimated at $1,500,000, and in the case of Mr. Sweitzer the shortage was placed at $414,000 by the prosecution.

MR. SWEITZER'S defense was that it would have been a compromise with honor to turn back to his successor a dollar more or a dollar less than the exact amount due and that the accounting by which the prosecution arrived at the figure of $414,000 was inexact. This inexactness was attributed to the confused condition of his books, and the jury returned Mr. Sweitzer to his loved ones and friends unsullied of honor on this ground and the representation of his counsel that the law was old and archaic, notwithstanding the State's rejoinder that the law against stealing went back to the tablets of Sinai.

The judge instructed the jury that a retiring county clerk by law must surrender to his successor all books and money and all interest fees of the office, but the jury held with Mr. Sweitzer that he could not possibly turn over the money if there was doubt as to the amount, and accepted his own declaration that he would make restitution as soon as the amount was fixed compatibly with his honor. He is still willing to do this, but the amount has not yet been fixed to his satisfaction.

The case, therefore, has been put away in the dead file and the envelope in the newspaper morgues along with those of Gov. Small and Mr. Zintak, whose quaint and somewhat incoherent soliloquy precisely expressed the people's sentiments on government and the morality and responsibility of public officials.

An Underfed World

By J. C. Rocca

DR. EDWIN G. NOURSE, of the Brookings Institution, and Dr. Faith Williams, of the U. S. Department of Labor, represented the United States in the League of Nations' committee which has made a survey of the problem of nutrition in its economic and agricultural aspects. The report shows that there is not a single country where the entire population enjoys a standard of nutrition adequate for the maintenance of health.

The previous four reports of the committee contained information and statistics of food production, consumption and prices, and a statement of the physiological bases of nutrition in various countries. This volume represents the first real effort to analyze the recent tendencies in food-consumption habits and in agricultural production. It is to be hoped that all those concerned with the movement towards better nutrition will give careful attention to the report.

The information given about the conditions in the United States seems to be very accurate and complete.

Airway De-Icer.

James B. Huntington, 730 Oak street, traveling salesman, formerly of Louisville, yesterday received word that the United States Patent Office has issued to him a patent which he hopes will end the killing of air travelers because of ice formation on plane wings.

Huntington calls his invention an "airway de-icer." Comparatively simple, it calls for the covering of the front edge of a plane wing with cellophane. Under the layer of cellophane where it wraps over the edge of the wing is a wire. The wire runs through a pulley in the cockpit. A tug by the pilot on the wire pulls it forward, slitting the layer of celophane on which ice has formed. Wind resistance then yanks the cellophane backward.

Eighteen inches back from the front edge of the wing there is a knife running the length of the wing. The wind sweeps the cellophane against this, cutting it off. There is a similar knife on the under side of the wing for the same purpose.

Underneath the one layer of cellophane thus described there would be another and another, each with its own wire, so that the plane would be deiced as often as needed.

Spurious Democracy

Charlottesville Professor Sees Universities Clogged With Misfits Who Only Degrade Higher Education.

The following discussion of "Education: Today and Tomorrow," by the Corcoran professor of history at the University of Virginia, is reprinted from College Topics, student publication at the university.

By Dr. Richard Heath Dabney.

NO PROFESSOR, I imagine, was startled by the list, given in a recent issue of College Topics, of words misspelled by students. Bad spelling, ungrammatical sentences and sloppy thinking by students may elicit heart-felt groans from professors at this and other universities, but are too familiar to excite surprise.

But let us consider the question why so many unprepared students are admitted to the university.

To begin with, it would be absurd to lay all the blame upon either the faculty or the administration. Low standards of admission to, and low standards of graduation from college are not peculiar to this institution. In fact there are many others where standards are decidedly lower than ours.

The malady is doubtless due to numerous causes. But perhaps a certain conception of "democracy" underlies more than one of them. The notion that one man is just as good as another, and perhaps a little better, has something to do with it. Every one is, of course, aware that all men are not equally capable of becoming star football players or prizefighters. Yet there is a vague sort of idea that any man can acquire "general culture," attested by a bachelor's degree.

Jefferson Advocated No General Scholarship.

DID THOMAS JEFFERSON, father of the Democratic Party, and father of the University of Virginia, believe any such nonsense as that. By no means. Jefferson wished Virginia to establish schools where every child should have a chance to learn reading, writing and simple arithmetic. But he did not consider it the State's duty to continue indefinitely to give free instruction to those who were either too stupid or too lazy to profit by that instruction.

On the contrary, he emphatically believed that only the really fit pupils in any grade should be given free tuition in a higher grade. For he well knew that the unfit are an actual clog upon the progress of the fit and upon the efforts of the teachers. No one should expect a teacher to squeeze blood out of a turnip or to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

Even had Jefferson never read the Gospel according to St. Matthew, he would have known that men do not gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles. Hence he knew that only the best pupils in the lower classes should be allowed to enter the high school, that only the best scholars in the high school could be permitted to enter college, and of course, that only the best college students should receive degrees and go on to graduate work. Were Jefferson alive today he would certainly oppose the pernicious idea that hordes of young people with largely meaningless degrees should be lumped by countless colleges upon the world.

As a matter of fact, the only justification for taxing poor farmers, mechanics or unskilled laborers for public education is that it is to the advantage of the State and all its people that the citizens with superior brains should have those brains trained to such a state of efficiency that all the people may profit by their leadership. It is sheer waste of money and effort to attempt the training of morons and loafers, and to assist them in their ambition to spend four years in such laudable extra-curricular activities as riding in automobiles, watching athletic contests, dancing and attending the "movies." It is not even kind to such "students" to give them degrees and let them imagine themselves "educated gentlemen."

Youth Must Determine Its Own Potentialities.

IT IS DESIRABLE that every man should learn at an early age what he can do and what he cannot do. If he be incapable of becoming a genuine scholar, a skillful physician or an able lawyer, the sooner he discovers the truth, the better not only for him, but for his parents and for the community. It is, indeed, positively cruel to a young man to deceive him into believing that he already is what he can never become. The college that confers a diploma upon an incompetent man, and thereby deludes him with the notion that he has "distinguished" himself, tells that man a falsehood, though perhaps with the best intentions and does him a serious injury. Far better that he should be a first-class plowman, plumber or carpenter than a piddling "white-collar" man with the silly idea that it is beneath him to earn his bread in the sweat of his brow.

I remember employing a man once to dig a ditch for me, and it was delightful to observe the ardor with which he did his work. "I'm as keen as a mink," he said, and the splendid energy with which he wielded the pick and shovel showed that the absurd idea that his work was unworthy of a man had never dawned upon his mind.

It is neither possible nor desirable that we should all be white-collar workers; one little disadvantage about that being that most of us would starve to death. The world does not need an unlimited number of lawyers, doctors, professors, engineers, actors, poets, musicians or novelists. Nor should we foster the asinine notion that it would be a good thing for every boy and girl to have a college degree or even to have a certificate of graduation from a high school.

No, Jefferson was right: in school, as eleswhere, the unfit should be weeded out, for their own good as well as for that of the public. If a college degree really meant that every holder of a sheepskin had exceptional brains and capacity to use them, thousands of those who, all over this land, are annually awarded degrees would never have received them.

It is high time that the spurious "democracy" now in vogue should be tossed into the scrap-basket and that the spirit of Jefferson should inspire the Governor of each State in the Union to wage an aggressive fight for the idea that the best brains in his State should have the best training available, but that mediocre and stupid persons should be positively discouraged from entering college and positively prevented from getting degrees.

State University Set No Compulsory Exams.

I KNOW a State university where, at one time, any graduate of any high school who stayed there for four years was almost certain to get a degree. No examination lasted more than an hour, and no professor was required to give any examination at all. One professor told me that, while he did give examinations, he always threw the papers, unread, into the fire. Some of the students were really unfit to enter the lowest class of a genuine high school.

I once heard a brilliant Berlin professor say that there were far too many students at the German universities. He was entirely right. For, although German students were vastly better prepared than many of the half-baked youths who are passed through American high schools, there were not jobs in Germany for so many highly educated men.

One of our troubles is that our school teachers are not sufficiently paid. Another is that many teachers are afraid not to pass dull or lazy boys and girls. There is "politics" in the schools, and teachers are afraid of losing their jobs if they maintain proper standards and refuse to pass the children of people with "pull."

I have heard this opinion frequently expressed, and believe that a courageous Governor could do much to correct the evil if he took the stump and fought it. Moreover, I believe that a resolute struggle would win in the end. The average American is not foolish enough to insist upon being taxed in order that crowds of young people may have a "good time" at high school and college.

One curse of American life is the subordination of quality to quantity. Our educational system would be much better if there were fewer but better schools and colleges, fewer but better paid teachers in the schools, fewer but better-paid professors in the universities, with only half the number of students.

Gov. Price! What think you of the splendid opportunity before you to lead Virginia in the educational footsteps of that supremely great man, Thomas Jefferson?

About Salzberg

Count Czernin's Gay Guidebook.

COUNT CZERNIN, writing about Saltzburg, warns us at the beginning that he is attempting no guide for the serious-minded music lover who regards a trip to Salzburg as a devout pilgrimage like that of the good Moslem to Mecca, and who innocently thinks that people go to the famous Austrian town only to hear immortal music. In fact, there isn't much about music in this little book—which is just as well, for the musical side of the yearly festival has been much written about in a serious way by such connoisseurs as Marcia Davenport and Olin Downs.

But so far as I know, the Count has written the first jocular and irreverent commentary on the history and folkways of Salzburg, the foibles and home life of its bright particular stars, and, in general, the character of the place and its visitors. For the information it imparts on those subjects, it seems to be a "must" for anyone who has been to Salzburg, who intends to go there, or who likes to think about going there.

Scarcely a pertinent subject is left untouched by the laughing and agile Czernin. With airy insouciance he tosses off advice on how to act and dress and sightsee and otherwise amuse yourself, takes a breathless spin through the piled-up centuries of Salzburg history (beginning with the time when the Romans knew it as "Juvavum"); utters some trenchant observations on the specimens of Gothic, Romanesque, Baroque, and Rococo architecture still extant in the vicinity; gives sage and ebullient hints on the hunting of stags, woodcock, the Austrian nobility, and festival tickets. All this in the amazingly small compass of some hundred and eighty sparsely filled pages, including a Puckish glossary.

CZERNIN'S STYLE (if it can be described by so ponderous a word) is colloquial and easy-going in the extreme—too great an extreme, some readers may say. But one finds it difficult to censure its light-hearted jesting, which is sweetly tuned to the miscellany of amusing facts and anecdotes that go to make up the tissue of these pages.

Typical of the imaginative humor of the book is this small excerpt from the chapter on architecture: "Some say that the Gothic is the true expression of the Germanic soul, and I believe that nowhere on earth will you today find as many Gothic souls rushing about the place as you do in Germanic countries. These delicious souls are shrines, beautiful receptacles of deeply hidden secrets. Often if you pry them open, you find the secrets gone; but that does not really matter as long as the shrine is there, that beautiful work of Gothic art, a thing to take home with you and quietly gloat over for hours on end." And there is the truth and freshness of a child's speech in this definition from the "Short Salzburg Dictionary:" "Music: The noise that makes you think beautiful thoughts."

Not much more can, or should, be said about "This Salzburg," for it is rather on the fragile and wayward side, and unsuited to dissection. It should be read and smiled over, its generous quota of apt drawings appreciated—and then the reader will start laying inevitable plans for a Salzburg holiday (preferably at festival time), or else be troubled by nostalgic daydreams.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Radio Kiddies' Hour.

(Very much after James Whitcomb Riley.)

The Radio Children's Hour comes to our house ev'ry night
To make the little people gay and fill 'em with delight,
An' bring the kiddies wholesome fun an' entertainment good.
And make 'em laugh and chortle fist as all good programs should;
An' all us children gather when the supper things is done—
We set around the radio and go mad, one by one
A-list-nin' to the programs that radio puts out,
An' the gollywobbles git us
Ef
we don't watch
out!

II.

"Good evenin', children," says The Voice, "Tonight there's gonna be A lovely little fairy tale all written up by me . . ."
It seems there was a convict what wouldn't say his prayers—
He got away one afternoon and didn't use the stairs;
We heered the prison sirens shriek an' heered machine guns roar,
An' ef we hadn't fainted we'd have heered a whole lot more,
But the gollywobbles git us
we
out!

III.

We get the bestest stories just before we go to sleep—
They make our eyeballs pop right out and make the gooseflesh creep;
A movie actor takes a poem by Edgar Allan Poe
An' makes it sound like sumthin' else upon our radio;
It gives us what pa calls the shakes; we have 'em all that night,
And even when the next day comef we still are full of fright;
The thing to do with Children's Hours, I guess, is tune 'em out,
For the gollywobbles git us
we
out!

IV.

"Tonight, my little friends, we have a program you will like."
The Voice says as we gather round an' listen to the mike . . .
There's arson, 14 murders and a shooting 'round the bend,
But everybody's happy at the inquest at the end,
Exceptin' pa and mommer, who have fainted on the floor— .
It seems that they can't take it like us kiddies any more;
I guess we'll have to keep them from the Children's Hour, no doubt,
Cuz the gollywobbles git 'em
they
out!

Small Talk.

A YOUNG PROFESSOR, who recently joined the staff of one of the local finishing schools for girls, is reported as not entirely impressed with the intellectual attainments of his charges.

Asked for his reactions, he stoutly maintains, "My pupils are the cream of society. Rich . . . and thick!"

McCARTHY.

However, he has not as yet reached the outspoken state achieved by a more elderly female pedagogue, on the local scene. The lady in question, affectionately referred to by her pupils as "The Battle-axe," regularly starts her morning labors with her silver-spooned debutantes by addressing them as "You gum chewing rowdies!"

A YOUNG colored boy drifted into the office the other day, and announced that he was looking for a job, because he had just been released from jail. He then handed over a letter recommending him as a first rate houseboy. It was written by a fellow jailmate!

His jailmate, in as frank a letter as this column has seen, confessed that he himself was in for forgery. But pleaded the ease of his fellow convict, who had just finished serving a first-time commitment of six months.

The forger recommends his fellow convict as "honest, faithful and willing," and states that the doctor and nurse at the District Jail are willing to back him up in these claims.

The only point open to question in the colored boy's recommendation is that he works with a "quiet efficiency." I mean, after all, there is such a thing as being too quiet!

However, if anyone wants an excellent colored houseboy, they may communicate with this column. And personally, I feel that his recommendation is "tops." As my check-forging friend states, "no one would be in a better position to evaluate the abilities and trustworthiness of a jailbird than a fellow jailbird."

Any takers?

A LOCAL street-car conductor is bouncing around blithely these days after 30 years in the service, because he has discovered a new racket.

He was under the impression that he had familiarized himself with all the tricks of the fare-avoiders, but a new one turned up just the other day. And it's given him a new lease on life. At that, it took him quite a few days to get onto the trick.

The feminine fare-avoider always advanced with the token held on the fare box between her gloved thumb and forefinger. The conductor watched while she dropped in her fare, but he became suspicious after a while when on successive days the token apparently lodged in the upper reaches of the fare box. Whatever the cause, the metal slug always failed to fall through.

The other day he made a grab for his not-so-fair passenger's hand. The token had been sewed to the forefinger of her black cotton glove!

AT LEAST one mail a week brings its story of a local cab driver. But our most recent acquisition concerns an irate driver who parted ways with a South American Embassy during the Christmas holidays.

Complaining, to our informant, of the extreme penuriousness of his diplomatic employer, he said that he didn't feel chauffeuring him was possible after the Christmas week incident.

It seems that the ambassador had fixed his eye on an excellent if expensive Christmas tree. But when he drove up in his imposing limousine the salesman immediately jacked the price.

"However, the ambassador was not a man without ingenuity. He ordered his chauffeur to return home, had him change into street clothes, and descend on the tree salesman driving his own antique coupe. Then, the chauffeur, acting under diplomatic orders, closed a deal at a price befitting his inauspicous appearance and ancient car.

However, although the ambassador obtained his tree at half price, it was the tree which broke the chauffeur's morale. The ambassador lost a chauffeur, and the District gained another cab driver.

SEARCHING around for column information on the life and times of a waitress, we ran into an O.-Henryesque bit of romance in one Pennsylvania avenue restaurant.

"The strangest thing that ever happened to me in this job," the young lady said, "would take quite a long while to tell about."

However, being urged, she went back two years to the beginning of the story.

"He was the meanest, oneriest customer I ever had," she said, "so finally I gave him a piece of my mind. I told him off!

"Well, a month later one of the girls who'd seen me bawl him out, bet that I couldn't get even a dime tip out of him, if I waited on him again. Well, for sheer meaness, I was as nice as you could ask. And he left a tip . . . and invited me to go to the movies!

"So for sheer meaness . . . I went to the movies with him. And—"

The story has several other chapters; but, as she says herself, pretty soon she wasn't feeling mean and—Reader, she married him!

But, as she herself said, that type of incident isn't really typical of what happens in the normal course of a waitress's job.

The American Legion lists six meetings for tonight. The Government Printing Office Post, No. 33, gathers in the green room, Harding Hall, at 7 o'clock; the U. S. S. Equality-Walter Reed Post, V. F. W.

A scholarship to the Southeastern University in accountancy or law will be tendered to a boy or girl whose father is a member of the department. Qualifications require a four-year course in a high or parochial school or its equivalent. Selection will be made on August 15. Past Department Commander Daniel E. Campbell, Past Commander Nathan Glueck and Commander George G. McLelch constitute the scholarship committee.

Past National Commander in Chief James E. Van Zandt, chairman of the national legislative committee, will address the open meeting to be held at the W. O. W. Hall, 935 G place northwest, Monday, February 21, on veterans' benefits and pending Congressional legislation.

National Capital Post.

Henry A. Hagan, formerly of the U. S. S. Maine, and Eugene K. De Lawder, formerly of the U. S. S. Pocahontas, were given the obligation by Commander Dr. John L. DeMayo at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Club last Tuesday evening. A Washington's Birthday eve dance will be held at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Club on February 21, with the proceeds to be placed in the relief fund. Irving Silverberg, of Advance Post, and his "Royal Vagabonds" will furnish the music.

U. S. Treasury Post.

The bingo party held at the Pythian Temple last Tuesday was well attended and financially successful. The proceeds will be placed in a clubhouse fund.

Poppy Committee.

Senior Vice Commander Philip R. Belt held a meeting of the poppy committee at the Department Headquarters last Thursday. Plans for the annual poppy sales were formulated and adopted.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Lily Pons in a song recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall; Frank La Forge, accompanist; Domenico Iascone, assisting flautist. Program: "Dites, que faut-il faire?" (Traditional), "Fraiches rives" (Gluck), Air and Variations (Proch), "Lerchengesang" and "Das Maedchen spricht" (Brahms), "Pastorale" (La Forge), "Pretty Mocking Bird" (Bishop), "Les Roses d'Ispahan" (Faure), "Les Papillons" (Chausson), Air from "L'Enfant et les Sortileges" (Ravel), "Green" and "Mandoline" (Debussy), "Je suis Titania" (Thomas), "Charmant oiseau" (David),

As is usual on her annual appearances here, Lily Pons was greeted yesterday afternoon by an audience that filled Constitution Hall and occupied the greater part of the stage. Her entrance was the occasion for a demonstration of ovational proportions, and her every song was received with the fervent applause that gladdens the heart of an artist. Unsatiated by the taxing program, the auditors demanded extra numbers which the apparently unwearied cantatrice granted between the groups and at the close of the recital.

The improvement in the vocal method of Mme. Pons observable last year is still a matter on which she is to be congratulated. Evidence of strain in the voice, however, indicates that she has been singing either too frequently or too arduously, as one noticed now and then a slight flattening of the pitch and a return of the pinched tone. These minor flaws were confined to floritura passages and seemed related to breath control. In unforced lyric singing the tone was pure and pellucid, and contained those nuances of color which delight a perceptive ear.

For the sake of those delicacies and the refinement of phrasing in which they were couched, one wished for less of the show-pieces and for more poetic cameos than the two lieder of Brahms and the five songs in French by Gabriel Faure, Chausson, Raval and Debussy. One enjoyed particularly her reading of the "Lerchengesang," Faure's "Les Roses d'Ispahan" and Debussy's "Green," wherein tenderness of intonation and lightness of rhythmic stress were nicely applied.

Since her agility in floritura is the magnet which draws the crowds, her program displayed that proficiency in such standard exhibits as Heinrich Proch's air and variations, David's "Charmant oiseau" from "La Perle du Bresil," and "Je suis Titania" from "Mignon." Additions in this style to her repertoire were the aria, "Fraiches rives," from Gluck's "Paris et Helene" and Franz La Forge's arrangement of Sir Henry Bishop's "Pretty Mocking Bird."

Federal Bar Conference Will Open Here Feb. 25

Assistant Attorney General Carl McFarland will open the first national conference of the Federal Bar Association, which will be held in the Department of Commerce auditorium February 25, President Horace Russell announced yesterday.

The program will be in charge of William N. Morrell. An administrative law forum will include the following panel speakers: William E. Reese, General Accounting Office; Robert M. Cooper, Department of Justice; J. Emmett Sebree, Board of Tax Appeals; George P. Barse, general counsel to the Comptroller of the Currency, and Walter M. Bastian, former president, District Bar Association. William R. Vallance, State Department, will conduct the forum.

All-Steel Model Farm Costing Only $2,000 Opened at Greenbelt

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

Post Staff Photos.

But What If the Horse Smothers?

At least one farmer who visited the Farm Security Administration's model farm at Greenbelt yesterday was not entirely won over. Why wouldn't a horse smother in the all-steel barn, he wanted to know. Left, Mrs. Kathryn Child and Danial K. Child at the back door of the five-room prefabricated house. The entire farm could be set up in a few hours at a cost of about $2,000. Right, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ford and baby, Edwina, inspect the electric stove in the combined kitchen-dining room.

'I Faw Down an' Go Boom—'

Mary Lou Little, 15 months old, of St. Louis, Mo., was put on roller skates as soon as she began to walk at the age of 11 months. Now she can skate as well as she can walk, which doesn't mean perfectly.

Oops! The skates got ahead of her that time. But Mary Lou isn't easily discouraged . . .

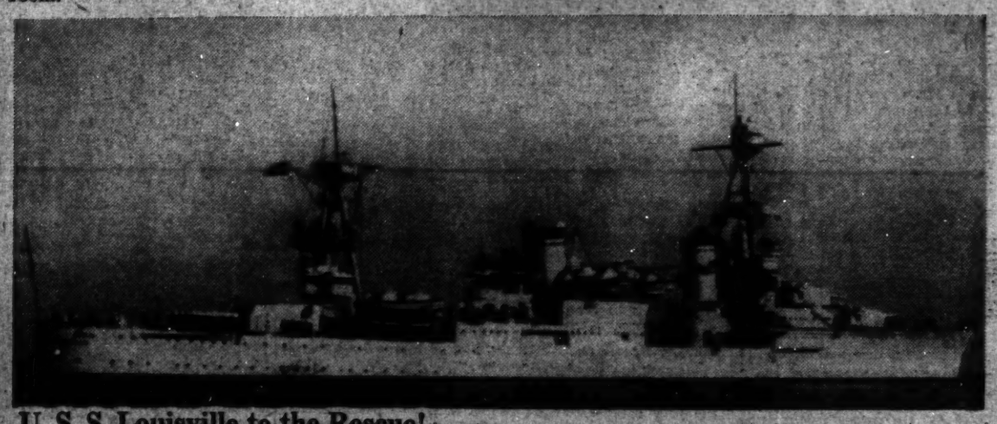
Up and at 'em! In less than a minute the bad tumble is forgotten and Mary Lou goes skooting across the floor with shrieks of glee.

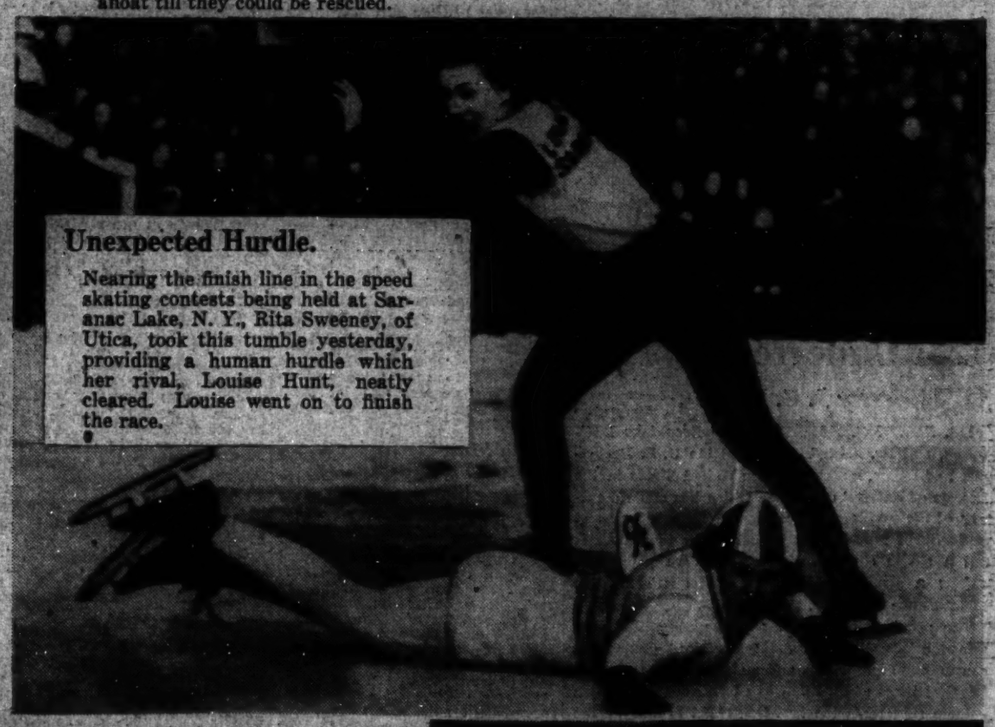
Collegians Choose D. C. School Girl as Queen

Five-foot seven-inch Katherina Avilla Brooks, who attends the Arlington Hall School in Washington, was the choice of Dartmouth College men to reign at their annual winter festival. She hails from Tulsa, Okla., has bright blue eyes and blonde hair and is only 17 years old. Here she's pictured at Dartmouth against a snowdrift background.



U. S. S. Louisville to the Rescue!

When a ferryboat carrying 150 persons capsized in Sydney harbor yesterday, men from the U. S. S. Louisville, which was maneuvering nearby, leaped into the sea and kept survivors afloat till they could be rescued.



Unexpected Hurdle.

Nearing the finish line in the speed skating contests being held at Saranac Lake, N. Y., Rita Sweeney, of Utica, took this tumble yesterday, providing a human hurdle which her rival, Louise Hunt, neatly cleared. Louise went on to finish the race.

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 13.

I can only write about the Hollywood I know, about my friends, neighbors and fellow workers. Amazing stories have been written, lots of them true. Hollywood is mad, gay and heartbreakingly silly, but you can't satirize a satire, and that's Hollywood. A great deal of it is ruled by fear.

HEDDA HOPPER.

* * * *

Fear that the next picture won't be as good as the last. Fear of options, bad publicity. Every village in the world has its problems, the only difference is that our town is sitting inside a goldfish bowl.

* * * *

I shall not set myself up either as judge or critic. But I'd like you to know them as I do. Garbo getting the once over. Garbo must be serious, and the reason I believe Greta Garbo will marry Stokowsky is this: before she sailed for Sweden she visited his most conservative relatives in Philadelphia to be looked over, and was passed by them 100 per cent.

How do I know? One of our junior leaguers met her there. How scandal is born!

* * * *

Needing some exercise a few Sundays ago, I went roller skating and found there at the rink, very much engrossed with each other, Irene Dunne and young Doug Fairbanks. Beating a hasty retreat to my typewriter to give out this highlight, Irene spied me and yelled:

"Hey, Hedda! Come here and watch us. Don't you think we're good?"

It was all to rehearse a scene from their picture, "The Joy of Living." I was glad I had the decency to blush.

* * * *

Join the movies and see the world. Cecil B. De Mille took half a dozen stars to New Orleans for the premiere of "The Buccaneer." Warners traveled 1,000 miles to show "Gold Is Where You Find It." Selznick treated the whole town of Zenda to a New York trip by plane for his opening of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and now Claudette Colbert has traveled to Paris, France, for the opening of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," for which she'll probably receive the Legion of Honor. I wouldn't fool you—she's having fun, too, on her belated honeymoon.

* * * *

Fannie surprised! Fannie Brice was more surprised than anyone at the success of "Baby Snooks," and says that Snookie is just a fugitive from "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and a throwback to her childhood desire to play Topsy.

* * * *

Tradition marches on. I came upon Tyrone Power on the "Marie Antoinette" set wearing a worn, tattered dressing gown. I just had to say something flip about it. He said: "Hedda, this belonged to my father and I love it. I only hope that one day I'll be able to fill it as well as he did." Some day I'm going to learn to keep my mouth shut.

Gayety

"DIZZY DANES," William Collins presents the musical production in two acts and 24 scenes, featuring Peggy Garcia and Charles "Red" Marshall, supported by Murray Leonard, Delores Dawn, Murray Green, Elsa Lana, Harry Clexx, Marie Voe, Irene Cornell and Johnny Cook. Dance numbers devised by Fred Bryant; staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John. B. C. A. A.

It is becoming apparent with each succeeding show playing here that the Independent Burlesque Association is out to give the public better entertainment than has been its fare for the past several seasons.

As a fair example, this revue has not one but several outstanding female personalities who are stars in their own rights. First is Peggy Garcia, whose name made the headlines from coast to coast during her recent court encounters with a famous musician. Peggy's appearance is flavored with an amusing oral set-to with dapper Johnny Cook and then she climaxes her initial bow here with a song offering. Comes next gorgeous Delores Dawn with her inimitable beauty parades, followed by the usual dance routines offered by Irene Cornell. Marie Voe, a petite brunette, completes a quartette of beauties such as hasn't been seen at the Gayety for many months.

Charles (Red) Marshall and Harry Clexx compete for comedy honors, with Marshall winning out by a wide margin. Marshall's style defies imitation, his wit and humor being entirely original and the manner in which it is offered different and amusing. Clexx, with the assistance of the cleancut and clever Johnny Cook, presents several comedy sketches that are effective.

One of the unsung stars of the performance, however, is Murray Leonard, a straight man for Marshall. We always knew that Murray was good, but his all-around work in this production stamps him as the outstanding actor in his line.

Little

Thumbing back through the catalogue of United Artists' feature releases to May, 1934, the management of the Little Theater emerges with a revival of "The Affairs of Cellini" as yesterday's major screen attraction for the new week.

This is the Bess Meredith adaptation to the cameras of Edwin Justus Mayer's stage play of "The Firebrand" and engages the sterling talents of a notable cast.

In the title role of Benvenuto Cellini, Fredric March, currently the star of Cecil B. De Mille's production of "The Buccaneer," on another screen, has one of his more impressive and more fruitful assignments. He is surrounded by a list of associate players that deserves the hoary description of "all-star"—Constance Bennett, as the Duchess of Florence; Frank Morgan, as Alessandro, Duke of Florence; Fay Wray, Vince Barnett, Jessie Ralph, Louis Calhern, last seen with Paul Muni in "The Life of Emile Zola;" Paul Harvey and John Rutherford. Direction was by Gregory La Cava.

In this story of Sixteenth Century Italy there are combined rousing drama, excitement, romance, melodrama and a highly artistic pictorial quality that made it one of the hits of its year. Despite its old world lavishness in setting and investiture, "The Affairs of Cellini" has something of the tang of modernity in its racy and sophisticated comedy.

"Snow White" Repeats in Washington Huge Success Enjoyed at Radio City

Disney Technicolor Feature Packs RKO-Keith's With 'All-Day-Sitters;' 2 Washingtonians Talk Around the World; Mr. Morse Writes a Book; Miss Bankhead Sees a Play—for the Seventh Time; Notes.

WALT DISNEY'S trail-blazing Technicolor production of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is repeating in Washington the phenomenal success that has attended its five-week engagement at the Radio City Music Hall in New York City, the largest theater in the world.

BELL.

This means that RKO-Keith's Theater has been packed continuously since the picture opened on Friday. Friday's incipient blizzard, to be sure, held attendance down to a point where it could be reasonably controlled by the theater floor staff, but Saturday was something else again. Box-office lines wound half way around the block and the final count of the day's receipts smashed every record the house ever has had to boast about—and it has done some boasting in its time.

As early as 8 o'clock Saturday morning the queues had formed and they continued all day. The principal problem of the management, once the house was full, was to prevail upon the pewholders to leave the theater and permit other anxious potential audiences to enter. I am informed that Manager Hardie Meakin made three stage appearances for the sole purpose of begging, beseeching and cajoling those who had sat through three or four performances please to get themselves out of there so others could come in and occupy the well-warmed seats.

This will be one of the difficulties throughout the run of "Snow White." It is a picture that cannot possibly be fully appreciated in its entirety at one viewing. It is so alive with every element of magnificent entertainment that it takes on almost the proportions of a three-ring circus—without the rings, of course.

That these all-day sitters arrived early and left late by malicious intent was made evident after the last spectator had left after the last show Saturday night. The janitors and cleaners had a new problem on their hands and their brooms and their mops. Under the seats were discovered all manner of evidence that "picnic parties" had attended "Snow White" with every intention of remaining throughout the day. The place was littered with milk bottles, lunch boxes, candy bags, cracker containers, popcorn cartons and what is there in the house to eat?

One youngster dashed madly into the lobby at 5:15 p. m., and frantically asked the time. When told, his bewilderment immediately became aggravated many fold. "Gee!" he said, "I've gotta get home. I've been in here since 8 o'clock this morning!"

That's the kind of a picture it is.

* * * *

The Radio City Music Hall record bears out the suspicion that "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" must be pretty good. It grossed $168,000 the first week, $110,000 the second week, $112,000 the third and $111,000 the fourth, with returns from the fifth week still unavailable as this is written. It is estimated that an attendance of 800,000 people during the five-weeks' run will compound a total intake of $600,000, approximately half the production cost on this one booking alone. I am almost tempted to believe that Mr. Disney may have something there!

* * * *

Rudolph Berger, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Joseph P. Morgan, former general manager of the late Harry M. Crandall's enterprises in Washington and vicinity, are still walking on air and babbling incoherently of a unique experience they enjoyed last week-end.

Rudy and Joe were guests of Elmore D. Heins, important theater operator of Roanoke, Va., and while there put in a long-distance phone call to their old friend, Harry Hunter, former Paramount manager in this city and now serving in a similar capacity in Sydney, Australia. The call was put in for 9 a. m., our time. It got through at 11:45 a. m., and according to the boys' breathless report to this desk was as "clear as a bell"—and please note the absence of a capital "b" on that last word!

The call went from Roanoke to New York, thence to Holden, Me., was short-waved by radio to London and from London direct to Sydney. The speech in short-wave transmission is transformed into "inverted conversation"—which is to say that high tones become low and vice versa, so that anyone tuning in on the circuit cannot understand a word that is said. They are thrown back to normal again upon reception.

To be sure of successful completion of the call, M. C. Richards, Roanoke manager for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., sat in on the doings and also said a few words to Australia. It was the first time this 14,000-mile call ever had been made from a point south of New York. The conversation lasted three minutes, at a cost of $15 per minute.

The boys gave Harry a good-by and good-luck headache by informing him casually that they were reversing the charges!

* * * *

Owing to that mid-Pacific time change, it is interesting to observe that Mr. Hunter, in Australia, was talking "tomorrow" to the Messrs. Berger and Morgan and they were talking "yesterday" to him. All right, call up the Weather Bureau, the corner grocer, the cop on the beat or someone, if you don't believe it.

It was a pleasant and highly instructive experience, sitting through the Saturday matinee performance of "Save Me the Waltz," with Tallulah Bankhead, at the National.

Miss Bankhead had not missed a performance of the Katharine Dayton play, in which her husband, John Emery, is leading man, throughout the week and I had seen only brief snatches of it since Monday night's opening. Many advantageous changes had been made and from a vantage point remote from other members of the audience, Miss Bankhead kept up a running and informative commentary on how and why the various alterations had been made. There was a new "curtain line" for the second act that failed to please either of us, for the reason that it completely dispelled the suspense and the purpose of the last act. Miss Dayton agreed. So one suspects that Philadelphia will not hear that line when the play opens there tonight for a two-weeks' engagement.

In addition to being a dramatic star of the first flight on her own account, Tallulah Bankhead, quite evidently, is a student of the drama, with a keen and unerring sense of stage and audience values. She is acutely aware that important first nights "do something to you," no matter how long you have played the given piece on the road and that conscientious critical judgment—if it is kindly and not malicious—is of inestimable assistance to author, cast and producer. This view is shared with her by Miss Dayton and Max Gordon.

Besides all that, Miss Bankhead is a companionable, jovial and witty person whom it is exceedingly nice to know.

Came a letter.

"Dear Nelson: I have asked E. P. Dutton & Co. to mail you immediately an advance copy of 'Backstage With Henry Miller,' which will not be released to an unprotected public until March 7. I hope you will not think it is too gosh-awful. Always yours, (Signed) FRANK P. MORSE."

Mr. Morse, needless to say, is author of the book, which arrived Saturday. Even if it already had been completely read, it might not be formally reviewed prior to its release date, according to a friendly admonition from the publishers. However, one may go so far as to guess that its contents will prove to have had their genesis when the good Doctor Morse and I both were new to The Post. I was here before he was. When he came next door from the Munsey Building and the late Frank Munsey's old Washington Times, we shared an office for something more than a decade and during that time never had an argument. There was a reason for this. In my eagerness to learn the intricacies of this crazy craft, I was willing to do most of the work. In his eagerness to forget them, Frank was willing that I should.

The situation was practically ideal for us both!

Thrown-Out-of-Heaven Note.

Mr. Morse now is an investment broker—and, of course, author.

Giant Star's Heft Capsizes Rowboat

Prop men failed to estimate the hefty weight of Wallace Beery during a rowboat scene for a waterfront sequence in "Madelon." When Wally climbed into the small boat water came over the sides and the star managed to jump for the dock just as the craft sank from sight. A larger rowboat had to be obtained for the scene.

Foster Manages New York Trip

Norman Foster, Twentieth Century-Fox director, and his wife, Sally Blane, are finally going to make that long-deferred trip to New York. The director of "Walking Down Broadway" has been trying for five years to get back to Broadway for a visit.

New York, Feb. 13.

REALTY DEPT.: Edna Ferber purchased some property in Westport, Conn., last week. Just as the contracts were being signed, the vendor—a Hungarian who had lived in the Westport community for many years—announced to Miss Ferber and her attorney: "I forgot to tell you—I want one extra condition clause put into the contract." . . . "What is it?" Miss Ferber asked . . . "I want a clause," demanded the vendor, "stipulating that you are not to use this property as a Nazi camp!"

* * * *

MOVIES: Ruth Gordon, one of America's most distinguished actresses, went to Hollywood to work for M.-G.-M., received her salary each week, but for some unexplained reason never appeared in a picture. On the day her contract expired, Miss Gordon received an invitation from Louis B. Mayer, telling her to be at the Trocadero the next night, where he was giving a party . . . Miss Gordon, who was packing her trunks, decided to reply via Western Union, and phoned the telegraph office. She dictated her reply, stating that she would not attend, and concluded with "From the Miss Gordon you never have met, either on or off the screen" . . . "I won't send that telegram now," the operator informed. "I want you to think it over. I'll phone you in a half hour, and then, if you still want me to, I'll send it."

* * * *

RADIO DEPT.: For its next broadcast the Radio Newsreel wanted to present Admiral Byrd, but N. B. C.'s John Royal wanted to limit his talk to a mere discussion of teenage, and to bar him from making comparisons . . . A substitute speaker was proposed—the Rev. Jardine, who married Mrs. Simpson to the Duke of Windsor. But Jardine, who probably will get Tom Noonan's job at the Chinatown Mission, was barred by N. B. C. on the ground that it would reflect upon British royalty.

* * * *

WEATHER DEPT.: The representative of a group of executives applied to Mayor La Guardia to have daylight-saving time extended. The representative brought charts explaining the solar system, orbits of the sun and the moon, the meridian, etc. . . . The Mayor took one look at these complicated charts, pushed them away, and declared: "Wait till I get through with unemployment and the Constitution. Then I'll go after the solar system."

* * * *

BOOK DEPT.: A titled lady went to Russia recently and succeeded in interviewing Stalin . . . On the walls of his office are no pictures of Lenin or Karl Marx. But there is a painting of Peter the Great . . . On Stalin's desk were three books: De Tocqueville's "Origin of French Literature," Taine's "History of Contemporary Culture" and Gibbons' "Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire" . . . And in his pocket Stalin carried a copy of Emerson's Essays.

* * * *

LOCAL NEWS: Earl Browder's 86-year-old father joined the Communist Party . . . Lawrence Tibbett will return from his Australian tour in April, and then will appear in "The Desert Song" for Warner Bros. . . . The Polish government has requested the United States Government to forward all official data concerning Vultee's death in that Montana plane crash. Poland had ordered a number of Vultee planes for its army . . . The Museum of Modern Western Art in Moscow will acquire 15 of Paul Meltzner's paintings—the largest collection of American art ever to leave this country . . .

* * * *

THEATER DEPT.: Jed Harris' production of "Our Town" now is the leading contender for the Pulitzer Prize, and once again praises are singing in Mr. Harris' ears . . . When Jed was the boy wonder of the American theater and produced "Front Page," Co-author Ben Hecht sat with him after the premiere. "I want to compliment you on a great job," Hecht stated. "Your casting was perfect, script editing was marvelous, direction was magnificent, lighting was superb . . ." Then Hecht sat back, his adjectives exhausted . . . Harris smiled softly, taking it all in, leaned forward, and prodded: "And how about 'imagination'?"

SOCIAL NOTES: Elliot Roosevelt arrived at the Savoy-Plaza Tuesday and joined the table of Vincent Sheean, author of "Personal History." They discussed reporters and Sheean declared: "I can look around this room, pick any man, and tell you what his business is" . . . Sheean looked around the room, pointed to a ringsider, and said: "He's an athlete" . . . The headwaiter identified that man as Gregory Mangin, the tennis champ . . . Sheean continued, pointed to another, and said: "He's a pugilist." That man was Enzo Fiermonte . . . Roosevelt was amazed, pointed to a distinguished-looking man, and asked: "What about him?" . . . "An executive, supervising a large staff," Sheean countered. He was James J. Atkinson, head of the Ambassador Hotel . . . Roosevelt still hasn't been told—that before his arrival, Sheean sat with Atkinson, who had introduced Vincent to Mangin and Fiermonte.

Columbia

"Mannequin" is what the Crawford fans ordered: Poor girl gets riches, and happiness to boot. As Jessie Cassidy, factory girl from New York's tenements, Miss C's vicissitudes, heart-throbs and Adrian gowns will receive the approbation of her most clamorous fans. It reopened Friday at the Columbia.

Spencer Tracy is the likable rich man, who marries Joan after her marriage with handsome scamp Allen Curtis cracks up on economic shoals. The second venture is successful, and the girl from Hester street lives happily in a mansion of the rich.

A fine fairy tale, this, with many radiant close-ups of Miss Crawford and sincere line-delivery by Mr. Tracy. Unless you are allergic to Grade B sentimentality, you'll like it all.

More attention could have been given the Cassidy family; hardworking mother, lazy father, smart-aleck son, they are interesting types which deserve lengthier treatment.

This innocuous item is undoubtedly designed for movie-goers who prefer slightly tepid romancifying to authentic realism. It is for those who believe implicitly that the rags-to-riches theme fits, not awryly, into the scheme of modern living.

An assortment of short subjects rounds out a bill which is unobtrusive enough for a Girl Scout, and sufficiently beglamored to suit the taste of Miss Government Clerk.

Talking Canine Sought for Film

Director Ray Enright is facing his most difficult casting problem. He is looking for a dog to talk for "Golddiggers in Paris."

Not that Enright expects the dog really to talk, as that part of the show will be handled by a ventriloquist. But he wants a dog that looks bored and sleepy and yet with an air of intelligence that makes him seem as though he could talk if he wanted to.

During the past week he has inspected several hundred dogs, of all types and sizes, terriers, Great Danes, St. Bernards and mongrels. Enright discarded them all except one Great Dane.

"No," he said finally, "take him away. Sorry, old fellow, you're not the type."

"It's a lie," said the dog; "I am, too. Wu, Wu!"

Enright gasped—then Hugh Herbert came out of hiding to explain he was just experimenting to see if he was as good a ventriloquist as he was in his vaudeville days.

Mystery Woman Lifts Film Veil

When an ancient register of the Hollywood Hotel is sent to the Smithsonian Institution at least one important page will be missing.

During the recent thirty-fifth anniversary celebration of the opening of the famous cinema hostelry a lovely, stylishly dressed woman reverently turned the pages of the register.

Each page she scanned eagerly, yet sadly—searching, searching. Reliving the past as a kaleidoscope of memories whirled past misty eyes, finally she reached the page she sought and quickly tore it out.

"This," she whispered before disappearing, "means more to me than it will to the Smithsonian Institution."

She was Jean Acker, widow of Rudolph Valentino, and the page was that on which they had registered when they arrived at Hollywood Hotel on their honeymoon.

Dowdy Gown Costs Studio A Mere $250

Esther Muir Wears Sleasy 'Rag' in Film That Lets McLaglen Punch.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Twentieth-Century Fox wanted a cheap, sleasy-looking evening dress today, went shopping and found exactly what it wanted—for $250.

That sounds on the face of it like more of that movie prodigality you read about. It sounds plain dumb, but the explanation is paradoxical.

The dress is a brick-red color, with pink flowers on it and it shows most of the back—and a good deal of the front—of blonde Miss Esther Muir, who wears it in the movie version of a Pennsylvania coal town dance hall, where a swing around the floor costs a nickel, 24 tickets for a dollar.

Miss Muir's frock is one of the ugliest, cheapest-looking rags ever to mar a feminine form, yet it came from one of the most exclusive dress shops in Hollywood.

"You'd think," Esther said, "that if you wanted a cheap-looking dress, you'd just go out and buy one for $12.98. That's what we thought, too. But we discovered that all the really cheap gowns had smart lines and a general effect of chic.

"So we went to the better stores and finally in the smartest shop in town we found this monstrosity I've got on, for $250. It was an exclusive model.

"The designer must have had a nightmare, but it was just what we wanted, so we had to pay their price. The moral is that money doesn't seem to mean a thing, except maybe in reverse, when you're shopping for a dress."

Miss Muir wears her fire-engine frock in Klotsky's dance hall, where much of the action—and what action!—in "The Battle of Broadway" occurs. This picture stars that battler from away back, Victor McLaglen, who's found a new sparring partner in the person of Brian Donlevy.

The scene being shot finds Donlevy dancing with Miss Muir, who is McLaglen's girl.

The latter takes one look, peels off his coat to reveal green suspenders and a brown-striped shirt, and wades in. Other dancers enter the fray, girls scream, guards rush up and Miss Muir, with a grim set to her pretty mouth, walks to the sidelines and grabs a chair.

"Whoosh!" she brings it down with all her might on the head of one of the cops.

He falls to the floor, with broken pieces of wood around him.

AMUSEMENTS.

J. J. Shugraves Entertain In Honor of Mrs. Leslie

Capital's Diplomatic and Social Sets Turn Out for Tea; Other Parties Arranged This Week for New York Visitor.

By Elizabeth Ford.

No, the invitations didn't say "from 4 to 9," but time wasn't important at the tea given yesterday by Dr. and Mrs. John J. Shugrue in honor of Mrs. Edgar Leslie, of New York. Midway through the evening, festivities still were in order, proving that society knows a good party when it sees one. Cookies and tea might have begun to lag but the guests still were staying strong. And Mrs. Leslie, who traveled over 200 miles to get a taste of Washington hospitality, can sit down any minute now and write a card to the stay-at-homes on Fifth avenue . . . . "having wonderful time."

As the house guest of Mrs. Abner Drury, who is Mrs. Shugrue's sister, Mrs. Leslie will remain in Washington until Sunday. More parties already are being planned for her and by train time next week-end she will have accumulated plenty of evidence that, just for the sake of fun, the Washington Whirl outranks the Big Apple. And that the Susie-Q is distinctly inferior to the Hostess Hop.

Mrs. Shugrue Wears Blue Lace

Assisting Mrs. Shugrue, who wore a gown of navy blue lace for the occasion, were Mrs. James Moran, Mrs. Abner Drury, particularly attractive in a floor-length dress of black chiffon trimmed with touches of crisp white at the neck; Mrs. John Lyons, Mrs. James Mitchell, Mrs. George Allen and Mrs. Barge Hartz.

Mrs. Leslie wore a stunning henna-colored cocktail frock, cut on simple straight lines. It was topped off by a cocktail jacket of the same color, painted in unusual gold designs.

The gayety of the party was helped along by the varied spring flowers and calla-lilies that filled the spacious rooms of the Shugrue's home on Leroy place. An immense centerpiece of spring flowers held the center of attention on the tea table, evidence of the fact that horticulture is just as important as hors d'oeuvre.

Among the eagerly welcomed guests were Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Moran, who had returned only the day before from Mexico. Mrs. Moran wore a dress of black crepe, trimmed with sparkling sequins and set off with a vivid scarlet tie.

Diplomats Are Among the Guests

Others glimpsed at the party in the afternoon . . . and evening . . . were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, much interested in the Morans' impressions of their native country; the former Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Arcaya, who have been doing a lot of entertaining themselves the past few days for their house guests, Senora Maria Garcia-Uslar and her son, Dr. Oscar Garcia-Uslar; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd, the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora Lupita Canas de Castro Beeche, and Resid Anamur, First Secretary of the Turkish Embassy.

Also among the many present were Representative John F. Dockweiler, of California, and Mrs. Dockweiler, Dr. James F. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hill, Miss Katherine Hall, Dr. and Mrs. William Gwynn, and Paulo G. Hasslocher, Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy.

Mrs. Miller to Entertain Members of 72d Club

Mrs. John E. Miller, wife of Arkansas' newest Senator, will entertain the Seventy - second Club this afternoon from 3 to 5 at her home at the Broadmead.

At the tea table will be Mrs. Myron D. Harlan, president of the Seventy-second Club; Mrs. William Oldfield, Mrs. H. McCormick, Mrs. Henry J. Richardson and Mrs. John McClellan.

Among the guests will be Mrs. John H. Overton, Mrs. William H. Dietrich and Mrs. Dennis Chavez.

Mrs. Miller has secured some unusual hooked-rug designs from a club in Arkansas which has been collecting them, and will display them at the tea.

Among Washingtonians at the Hotel Commodore in New York are John Herrick, Mr. and Mrs. Black, Mrs. Waldon Faulkner, Miss Crystal B. Key and Oliver Griswold.

• • • • •

Mrs. H. A. Kneeland of Brookline, Mass., is now at the Hay-Adams, as are Miss G. Riday and Miss M. Furlong, of Philadelphia.

Red Coats Bring Hunt Color to Capital Streets

Red coats poured into Washington around 2:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon as George M. Benoit, owner of the "Snowden" estate near Fredericksburg, Va., entertained 100 guests at a hunt breakfast at the Carlton Hotel. The town still is talking about it. The group rallied around the host at a hunt near Warrenton that morning.

Among Washington and Fairfax guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Graham, William McClellan, Reed Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. David Wickens, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas De Lashmutt, Deake Otterway, Miss Jeannette Francis, Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Mills Astins, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Palmer, and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Sheehan.

Others were Miss Bernice Finch, Mr. and Mrs. Rixie Smith, Capt. and Mrs. John Meade, Capt. and Mrs. Henri Leuberman, Mrs. Margaret Thomas, Miss Leila Stiles, Mrs. Evelyn Dillard, Shorty Lipscomb, Arthur Godfrey, Miss Mary Whitaker, William Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Marion Strickling, Charles Rawlings, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Van Lennep, Lyle Smith, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Smith Bowman, Mrs. Angela King and Mrs. Neitah King.

Guests from farther afield . . . that is, Fredericksburg . . . included Mr. and Mrs. C. O'Conor Goolrick, Miss Frances Goolrick, Dr. and Mrs. Frank J. Reichel, Dr. and Mrs. Claude T. Nunnally, Mrs. Garl Melchers, Mr. and Mrs. William W. Butzner, E. L. Jones, Dr. and Mrs. Morgan L. Combs, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Ashby, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph T. K. Cornwell, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Schlemmer, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar M. Young, jr., and Miss Constance Young.

Also from Fredericksburg were Mr. and Mrs. T. Benton Gayle, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Taliaferro, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruffin, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Houston 3d, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. Budd Wales, Miss Ellen Knox, Mr. and Mrs. George Sheldon, Mrs. J. Garnett King, Miss Erma Bell, Edward Bell, jr., Miss Blanche Russeell, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cowan, Miss Elsie Genther, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lindstrom and Miss Patricia Benoit.

Biddles Feted In Philadelphia

The United States Ambassador to Poland and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, who were the social hits of last week in Washington, are now going strong in Philadelphia.

On Saturday evening they were the guests that all the other guests were anxious to meet when Gov. and Mrs. George H. Earle 3d, gave a dinner in their honor at Haverford, where they spent the past week-end.

Last evening they were feted again at a dinner by Mrs. Anson W. Hard, who is a sister of Mrs. Earle.

Another pair of Washington's recent social lions, Lord and Lady Stanley, were among the guests at a cocktail party given at Villa Marina, at Palm Beach Saturday. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Sidney J. Legendre, Mr. and Mrs. Mario Pansa and John Sanford. Mrs. Ogden Mills was also present.

That evening Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy were hosts at a dinner given at the Beach Club in Palm Beach, and Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean entertained guests at a similar party at the Italian Fete at Whitehall.

Leon Shermans Return March 1

Now on a wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Sherman will make their home in Washington after their return on March 1. They were married at the Lafayette Hotel January 30. Mrs. Sherman is the former Miss Frances Rappaport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Rappaport. Mr. Sherman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sherman.

At the ceremony performed by Rabbi Solomon Metz, the bride wore a dress of ivory satin with a long train and fitted bodice. Her only attendant was her cousin, Miss Jeanette Cohen, who was gowned in peach net. Bernard Easterson served as best man.

After the wedding, a dinner was served at the Lafayette Hotel.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

STRONG MEN gasped for air and several women nearly fainted at the gala Thrift Shop Frolics on Saturday evening at the Sulgrave Club. Never has a charity ball there brought out so large a number of people, and the crush, which included a cross - section of all Washington, was terrific.

DUDLEY HARMON.

At 11:30 the coat checks ran out, and at the end of the evening people who had been waiting for what seemed like hours to get their wraps finally climbed over the partition and began to search themselves.

Nobody who hadn't gotten there promptly at 10:30, when the ball officially began, stood a chance of seeing the floor show. Outside the ballroom, where it was presented, people stood several hundred deep to catch a glimpse of the performers, some of them standing on chairs and the stairway. But the most anyone could see from this position was the curly top of Helen Morgan's head.

• • • • •

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S ARRIVAL created a well-bred furore. She was escorted by George Garrett up the stairs and to the place of honor beside Mrs. John R. Williams, chairman of the Thrift Shop and organizer of the ball. Mrs. Frederick Sterling and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, daughters of Mrs. Williams, sat nearby.

The First Lady's evening gowns have been particularly lovely this year, and last evening she wore one of her handsomest. Of gold brocade, unusually fine material, it had a tulle scarf at the shoulders. Mrs. Leiter wore lame with a jeweled butterfly ornament and Mrs. Sterling, whose husband is Minister to Latvia, was in black. Mr. Sterling will sail for Riga as soon as he finishes business in connection with last summer's Paris Exposition, to which he was United States commissioner.

The James Roosevelts spent most of the evening sitting quietly downstairs away from the crowd. With them for a while was Prince Serge Obolensky, down from New York, and wearing a soft shirt, which caused some comment.

• • • •

AS TO who else was there: Mrs. Robert Low Bacon came in with beautiful Mme. van Haersma de With, the latter in a black satin dress. Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, in plum-colored satin, was accompanied by Mr. Houghteling. Mrs. Vandenberg, wife of the Senator, was surrounded by friends the entire evening. Maj. and Mrs. David Barry — their daughter, Miss Alice Barry, has succumbed to the 'flu—were present, as were Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, who wrote the clever verses on the posters decorating the walls; Mrs. Horace Peters, Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver, the latter wearing a gown of white fringe; Mrs. Heywood Newbold, chatting with Herbert Ford; Lieut. Gerauld Wright and Baron Serge Korff, here for the week-end; Benjamin Plunket, Christopher Bramwell, John Stonborough, Amory Lawrence, George Williams, Miss Hazel Edgar, and many, many more.

• • • • •

BY THE WAY—where was the most wonderful sign in Washington that evening? It was hung at a recent meeting of the Friday Evening Supper Club there and says: "Please don't throw ashes on the stairway. The carpet cost $400."

Miss McGuffey Presents Recital

Anne Yago McGuffey, contralto, entertained members of the Women's City Club this afternoon with a program of songs, including selections from operas in which she has sung. Mrs. Mary Izant Couch, chairman of music, accompanied her. This was one of the Sunday teas sponsored by the hospitality committee, of which Mrs. Gladys Ball Middlemiss, acting president, is chairman.

Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan, civil service commissioner, will address a large gathering of club members and friends tonight evening at a dinner in honor of Washington newspaperwomen. Following the dinner, a program will be presented by Miss Marjorie Webster, of the Marjorie Webster Schools, and a student, Mrs. Sylvia Ziskind. This will be their first appearance together, in a program prepared especially for the occasion.

The committee in charge includes Mary Clifford, Bliss Finley, Pearle Jencks, Mrs. Thomas Sherman and Naomi G. Sternheim, chairman of publicity. Mrs. Middlemiss will be toastmistress for the evening.

Col. T. Bentley Mott's "Twenty Years as a Military Attaché" will be revieved by Ann Singleton at the book hour, 5 p. m., tomorrow.

The ways and means committee is sponsoring card parties at 2 p. m. and 8 p. m. on Wednesday. Mrs. Edgar T. Brown is chairman and Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, vice chairman. Assisting committees include: prizes, Mrs. Frank A. Birgfeld, Mrs. Gus A. Schuldt; cake sale, Roberta Tull, Susan Baker, Mrs. Custis Perry, assisted by the French section; candy sale, Mrs. Metta Cole, assisted by Friday bridge section; presiding at the tea table, Mrs. Helen Doocy Reed.

Others assisting the ways and means committee are Mrs. George Eastment, Mrs. Middlemiss, Mrs. George B. Hartman, Mrs. Albert Dodge, Olive Beatty, May Gott, Margaret Vail, Mrs. Frederick Yates, Mrs. Frank Golden, Mrs. Don A. Sanford, Mrs. A. Allen, Isabel Allen, Mrs. John Waters, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Mrs. Edmund D. Kochersperger, Flora Schuldt, Flora Huff, Mrs. Caroline B. Stephens, Loretta Barnes.

Hadassah Plans Anniversary Tea

The Washington Chapter of Hadassah is observing its nineteenth anniversary with a membership tea tomorrow at 2:30 at the Mayflower Hotel.

The guest speaker will be Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin, former national president of Hadassah, who lived in Palestine for the last three years and is now Palestine correspondent for Hadassah. During the disturbances there last year she was in the vanguard of leaders organizing relief measures to take care of refugees that crowded into Jerusalem from outlying sections. Last summer she attended several sessions of the actions committee of the World Organization in Jerusalem. She will describe the part Hadassah plays in the upbuilding of the Jewish homeland through the organization's medical activities and participation in colonization and land redemption.

The music will be by Benjamin Ratner, Washington, pianist, who will present a Chopin program. Mr. Ratner studied at the Juilliard School of Music in New York and was a pupil of Ernest Hutcheson and Joseph Lhevinne.

Luncheon has been arranged for 1 p. m. to precede the birthday meeting, reservations for which are being made with Mrs. Paul Pearlman.

Tomorrow evening, the Junior Hadassah also will hear Mrs. Halprin at its meeting in the Community Center at 8:15.

The Misses McGerr Entertain At 'Pioneer Party' for Writer

Frontier Atmosphere Pervades Affair Honoring Miss Mari Sandoz; Sixty Guests Include Congressional Families.

Invitations printed in red ink and bearing quaint verses urged 60 guests to be present at a "pioneer party" given by the Misses Grace, Helen and Patricia McGerr last evening at the Admiral Club. The hostesses, who are natives of Nebraska, didn't let their friends forget it for one minute during the party which, from first to last, had a strong Nebraska accent.

The affair was in honor of Mari Sandoz, noted author who wrote "Old Jules" a best seller of a few seasons ago and who seems to be ringing up a successful repeat in "Slogum House," which is attracting wide attention.

Among the guests on hand when festivities got under way at 8:30 were Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Senator and Mrs. George W. Norris, Mrs. George Dern, Commander and Mrs. Ernest G. Small, Representative and Mrs. Henry Carl Luckey, Representative and Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, Representative and Mrs. Karl Stephan and Representative and Mrs. Charles G. Binderup.

Others of the many who were present included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shields, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lanigan, Burnita Shelton Matthews, and Arthur J. Esgate.

Things started off with an old-fashioned spelling bee done in a new-fangled manner. Two teams, one called "The Prairie Dogs" and the other, "The Coyotes," lined up against each other. Mrs. Ned Brunson, one of the team captains, was designated princess of the Prairie Dogs while Miss Margaret Hart bossed her brigade as queen of the Coyotes. Senator Burke as matser of the hunt, gave out the "ammunition" (the words) while Judge Fred K. Nielsen, as "gun bearer" fired on the unlucky ones who failed to spell correctly. The winner received an autographed copy of "Old Jules."

After that a psycho-analyst took the program over with hilarious results and then the guest of honor, Miss Sandoz, told of some of her experiences as an author.

Finally a group of former classmates of Miss Patricia McGerr when she attended Trinity College here, and some of her classmates in the Columbia School of Journalism rang up the curtain on a skit entitled "Murder in the Cornfield."

The evening was concluded with a hearty supper of pioneer fare . . . baked beans, ham, cider, doughnuts and coffee.

Men's Night Set By Eastern Star

Trinity Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will have a "men's night" Thursday, with the program in charge of Melvin Wertz, followed by dancing and refreshments.

Miss Blanche Bowen, of Bethlehem Chapter, newly elected president of the 1938 Matrons and Patrons Association, has called a meeting of the officers and members of the executive committee at her home, 1712 Sixteenth street, tonight at 8 o'clock. Other officers include: Vice president, Wilfred D. Seal, patron of Ruth Chapter; secretary, Mrs. Marguerite Davis, matron of Lebanon Chapter; treasurer, Mrs. Clara E. Scott, matron of Congress Lodge Chapter; members of the executive committee, Miss Leona C. Whitt, of Loyalty; Ira Bain, of Harmony, and William Clark, of Joseph H. Milans Lodge Chapter.

The associate grand matron and patron and associate matrons and patrons of the jurisdiction will be guests of honor at the meeting of Bethlehem Chapter February 22. Bethlehem is also planning a dance and card party at the Wardman Park Hotel February 28.

Mrs. Minnie M. Neil is the newly elected president of the 1934 Matrons and Patrons Association. Other officers include Benjamin F. Lusby, vice president; Mrs. Viola Hudson, secretary; Mrs. Ruth Beaujan and Otho F. Baker, executive committee.

Floridians Plan Dance.

The Florida State Society has completed plans for another mid-winter dance to be held from 9 to 1 o'clock, Friday, in the main ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. Officers making arrangements include Dan P. Mularkey, president; Sam E. Cobb, secretary; Miss Marie Cone, chairman of membership committee.

Zadeikis Plans Freedom Fete

The Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Povilas Zadeikis will give a reception on Wednesday at the Legation in celebration of Lithuania's independence. Twenty years ago while the World War was still raging and while Lithuania was under German military occupation, the declaration of independence of Lithuania was signed at Vilnius, its capital. Among those who put their signatures to this declaration was the first and present president of the Republic of Lithuania, Antanas Smetona.

The Lithuanians in Baltimore are also planning to celebrate that day by giving a banquet at which the Minister and Mme. Zadeikis will be guests of honor. They will leave for Baltimore immediately after the reception at the Legation here.

Today the American Lithuanian Society of Washington will attend a mass which will be celebrated at the Immaculate Conception Church at 10 o'clock to commemorate the twentieth anniversary of Lithuania's independence. The society will give a dinner at the Powhatan Hotel on Sunday, February 20, in honor of this anniversary and will have as their guests the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis.

Birth Control Funds Sought

The Mothers Health Association, which sponsors birth control clinics in the District, is launching an appeal for funds to enlarge its services, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice president of the association, announced today.

The association is the outgrowth of the family betterment committee formed originally to promote the work of the birth control clinic at the George Washington University Hospital. In July, 1937, headquarters were opened in a small house at 715 E street southwest. Starting with one session each week, the clinics have increased to one evening and three daytime clinics, equally divided for white and colored patients. Advice is given by a woman physician, and a full-time trained nurse is in attendance.

The Mothers Health Association is governed by a board of trustees which includes Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice president; Mrs. Fontaine C. Bradley, secretary; Mrs. Lewis C. Ecker, treasurer; Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mrs. Milton W. King, Mr. Frederick A. Ballard, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, D. D., Mr. George Hewitt Myers.

Doctors W. Sinclair Bower, Worth B. Daniels, Lewis C. Ecker, A. Y. P. Garnett, Francis R. Hagner, W. H. Hough, Howard F. Kane, Kate Karpeles, Elizabeth Kittredge, Sterling Ruffin, Walter R. Stokes and Prentiss Willson serve on the medical advisory board.

Rep. Jencks Will Speak At Democratic Forum

Representative Virginia Jencks, of Indiana, the first American woman ever to sit as a member of the Interparliamentary Union, will be the guest speaker at the Monday forum luncheon at the Woman's National Democratic Club today. Mrs. Jencks, appointed last year by Senator Alvin Barkley, president of the union, to represent the American Government at the meeting in Paris August 31 to September 5, will tell of her first conference and outline the aims of the organization, formed some 50 years ago. It is made up of representatives of the governing bodies of 28 nations.

Sen. Caraway, Among Guests At Luncheon

Wives of Representatives From Arkansas Hostesses at Russian Troika.

Senator Hattie W. Caraway was present Saturday afternoon at a Valentine luncheon given by Mrs. William J. Driver and Mrs. Ben Cravens, wives of Representatives form Arkansas. The event took place at the Russian Troika.

Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard of Texas; Mrs. John E. Miller, wife of Senator Miller of Arkansas, and Mrs. Claude A. Fuller, wife of Representative Fuller of Arkansas were the other ranking guests.

Among those who attended the party were Mrs. David D. Terry, Mrs. Wade Kitchens and Mrs. John McClellan, all wives of members of the Arkansas delegation; Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, wife of Representative Lea of California; Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, wife of Representative Fulmer of South Carolina; Mrs. John E. Rankin, wife of Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, and Mrs. Malcolm C. Tarver, wife of Representative Tarver, of Georgia.

Also present were Mrs. William Oldfield, Mrs. John Marshall, Mrs. Tillman Parks, Mrs. Roy Williams, Mrs. Samuel M. Wassell, Mrs. I. Lentz, Mrs. John N. Sandlin, Mrs. P. L. Hodges and Mrs. R. Goode.

• • • •

Mrs. John E. Miller, wife of Arkansas' newest Senator, will entertain at a tea from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon at her apartment at the Broadmoor for members of the Seventy-second Woman's Congressional Club.

A display of Colonial hooked rugs of unusual patterns made by Mrs. Miller's friends in Arkansas will be exhibited.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. John H. Overton, Mrs. W. H. Dieterich, Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Mrs. William Oldfield, Mrs. Henry J. Richardson, Mrs. John McClellan, Mrs. W. T. McCormack and Mrs. Myron B. Reed, president of the Seventy-second Club.

Lady Lindsay Concert Sponsor

Lady Lindsay heads the patron list for the annual Lenten concert to be given March 14 by the A Capella Choir of the First Congregational Church under the direction of Mrs. Ruby Smith Stahl. The event will take place at Constitution Hall.

Others whose names appear on the sponsoring list are the German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff; Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister; Faik Konitza, Minister of Albania; Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Claude Pepper, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Distressed by Height and Tendency to 'Lead' Man When Dancing, School Girl Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a high school girl, 16 years old, who just started going to dances this year. I am 5 feet 8 inches tall and most of the boys I go with are just my height and I can't ever wear anything but very low-heeled shoes. This makes me feel very awkard and gawky. Could you please tell me how to overcome this embarrassment?

I have another problem that is even worse. At the dances I find that I can't follow the different boys, which makes it very awkard for me. Several years ago at camp I led the girls, not knowing any better, and now I can't seem to get over it. I have taken ballroom dancing for a few weeks but it didn't do much good and I had to give it up as money is pretty scarce in our family. I am told that tap and ballet dancing are helpful in overcoming this stiffness, but I'm afraid the family budget can't include this. I do hope you can give me some suggestions for helping myself. Yours truly,

PUZZLED.

DEAR PUZZLED: I think it is a mistake for an unusually tall woman to try to disguise her length of limb by wearing extremely low-heeled shoes. All she achieves in consequence is a flat-footed appearance. She should, rather, choose gracefully designed shoes with slender heels not more than an inch and a half in height (footwear of the opera-pump variety is admirably suited to her need); carry herself with easy asurance, head up and shoulders back; never, never making the sorry error of slumping down in a hollow-chested way (which always suggests a wilting string bean); and then simply forget about the fact that she is a tall woman, unless she can remember it with a certin pride and pleasure.

* * * *

After all, you know, tall girls are always preferred for modeling the stunning clothes turned out by the foremost couturiers in this country and abroad; the late Florenz Ziegfeld's Follies beauties—his glorifiefid American girls—always were costumed to give the impression of superior height, and some of them, at least, were taller than the average; and last but not least, and believe it or not, the average man whose admiration and good opinion is worth having, doesn't give a hang how tall a girl is, if she happens to be "good company," so called.

* * * *

Let me tell you an amusing true story to prove the point. A man whose work has kept him in daily contact, for more years than you have lived, with beautiful women of the stage and screen, found himself one night at a party, the feminine contingent of which was largely made up of beautiful girls in their twenties. But also present was a woman around 40, homely of face, thin of figure and quite exaggeratedly tall. To quote his own words, he "dodged her all evening." But finally, in common courtesy, it devolved upon him to ask her to dance. To his consternation and delight, he found her easily the best dancer in the crowd; highly intelligent, a witty conversationalist whose wisecracks evoked his uproarious laughter, and the upshot was that instead of dodging, he "dogged" her footsteps for the remainder of the evening. "I thought," said he, in recalling the incident, "to h—— with the youngsters. Here is a woman I really enjoy. I wouldn't have cared if she had been 9 feet tall."

* * * *

Also, by way of further reassurance, let me tell you about a certain young professional woman I know who is exactly your height—5 feet, 8 inches tall. At an amateur fashion show, staged for the benefit of charity, she "stole the show" with her air of casual queenliness. And this is how she feels about her height: "At first, in your teens, you are concerned about it. Then you get used to it, and finally enjoy it. You actually resent it when you find yourself in a room with a woman taller than yourself. You've gotten used to being the tallest woman wherever you go, and, by golly, you want to keep on being the tallest woman."

* * * *

The clever way to manage length of limb, therefore, is to make the most of it, rather than attempt to camouflage or diminish it. So utilize it that heads turn in interest, admiration and envy when you enter a room or float out on the dance floor. Remember that, being an eye-compelling person, you've got to have something in your own personality to back up the first arresting impression. An intelligent, cultivated, witty and humorous mind helps fill out the picture; so, too, do the right clothes and dressing yourself for best effect is a problem which you must work out for yourself through study, experimentation and possibly through consultation with a stylist. It is a great social asset to be a really good dancer, and that, of course, can be achieved through determined and indefatigable practice, which brings us to your second problem.

* * * *

To "take ballroom dancing lessons for a few weeks" and then depend upon intermittent dance invitations as opportunities for perfecting your dancing technique is putting too much of a load on your boy friends' shoulders. Generally speaking, a girl should know how to dance really well before accepting dance invitations, or else prepare to be avoided like the plague on the dance floor thereafter. Tap and ballet dancing no doubt would give you greater ease and grace of motion; improve your sense of rhythm, and co-ordinate your muscular control, but since your greatest current difficulty is in following your partner's lead, it seems to me you would be going round Robin Hood's barn to gain your point, in studying these special solo dance patterns when what you need is patient practice in ballroom dancing itself.

* * * *

The only solution to your dancing problem, as I see it, is a course of private instruction where you will be supplied with a skilled male partner. The local Y. W. C. A. offers class courses, but I am told the classes are preponderantly feminine, and while the fees are reasonable, there again you are up against the possibility of having to "lead" occasionally; and even though you follow some other girl's "lead," still you aren't getting the quality of practice you—with your particular difficulty—need. Surely, if your parents can afford to send you to "camp," they can afford to give you the benefit of thorough-going dance instruction, and I am sure they will, if you just break down and tell them how the lack of it is darkening your social life.

M. H.

Spring Fashion Trends for the Younger Set

WHETHER she goes to school or to a party, her frock must show the newest spring trends. At right a daytime dress of pin dot aqua silk crepe with simulated bolero with sawtooth edging and skirt with side pleats. Design is also effective in cotton. Below, Big Sister and Little Sister wear the same style party frocks of peach silk mousseline. Double puffed sleeves have deep turquoise ribbon to match sashes and bow knots on skirts.

Wardrobes of Spring Featured For Style-Conscious Children

WITH CLOTHES playing such an important role in the development of personality and self-confidence, the spring wardrobe for the small girl is a matter of vital moment. In this, National Children's week, stores are featuring what the younger members of the family will wear.

Little girls today are as style conscious as their mothers. They are as careful in their choice of frocks and no longer are content with "just dresses" but want a wardrobe which will enable them to appear on any occasion properly dressed.

For the luncheon, movie or matinee, there are festive silks in paper taffeta or crepe, in dainty patterns and solid color tones in pastels and bright hues. White prints on brilliant grounds are new and fresh looking; red and blue being generally favored as backgrounds. Gay plaids are also much in evidence as are also multi-colored designs. These feature pleated skirts, in knife, fan and accordian versions; with various bodice interpretations.

Silk sheers and pastel taffetas are ideal for dancing school, weddings and birthday parties; in such shades as peach, soft blues and acquas, pale pink, yellow and the inevitable white. Flared skirts, puffed sleeves, velvet bows and flower trimings are the new features here—in skirts of varying lengths. For the informal party, there are clever little bolero dresses of solid colors, and gala polka dotted versions adorned with sawtooth edging. Such handmade touches as smocking, shirring, pleated frills, and fagotting appear on many of the pastels and dark-toned solid color dresses.

School costumes, styled in simple fashion of the tailored type, are made of silks, rayons, sheer wools or cotton. Many flaunt fitted or box jackets of self materials; others, are made in one or two-piece styles, trimmed or untrimmed, according to the material used and personal preference. For the simple school dress, buttons are a smart adornment; also, contrasting piping.

Throughout the entire juvenile collections, simplicity is stressed, regardless of the type of dress. The newest juvenile clothes are smart and yet designed especially for children, instead of minature models of adult clothes. It is almost the other way round this season, with the "oldsters" borrowing many little girl styles—such as collars, sleeves, and full skirts.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 13.

IN THE minds of those who have never seen it, considerable (excuse the word, please) glamour seems to surround the slightly magic name of "Park avenue." Some believe it to be a highway peopled by gorgeous gold-plated girls and haughty and handsome youths, while others suuspect it to be Main street, Gomorrah, devoted to penthouse love nests and other evil manifestations.

Neither is a true bill. The simple fact is that it is the dullest and most colorless highway in upper Manhattan, with no excuse for its Nation-wide reputation and its wealthy denizens save keen promotion and propaganda. Its fashionable stretch, between Forty-sixth and Ninety-sixth streets, is just an ugly stone canyon. It has no beauty, no sparkle, no metropolitan splendor—just row after rom of enormous tenement houses with fancy rents and fancier and sillier doormen.

ALICE HUGHES.

It looks out upon no lovely park or thrilling river. A dismal tree-lawn minus trees is its only "adornment." All in all, Park avenue is just the slums of the rich. It is very strange business. Occasionally the stone walls are broken by a church, or the Lenox Hill Hospital, or a high-millinery club. Its lower reaches have the fine Waldorf and Ambassador Hotels, and such upper case restaurants as Sherry's and the Crillon. At the lunch hour luscious ladies twitter about these rallying points, but by 3 p. m. the sidewalks are peopled only by costly ladies walking their costly dogs. Once in a while there is some excitement when St. Bartholomew's has one of its gala weddings, complete with awning, plug hats and a crowd of those elderly women who are semi-professional wedding watchers.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Now and then a visitor gets a bigger thrill here than he or she dared to hope for. Take the young couple from Atlanta who were celebrating their first wedding anniversary. These gay young friends of mine, with a party, went to our Cuban night spot, La Conga, one evening. It happens that the happy husband is a magnificent shag dancer, and his exploits on the floor held all eyes. At the next table were Eleanor Powell, her mother and her handsome boy secretary, and the pretty tapster's eyes followed every move. At last Mrs. Powell tapped the lad on the shoulder. "My daughter would like very much to dance with you," she said—and in a twink the Atlanta boy and the film star were shagging away so brilliantly that they had the floor alone and were frantically applauded! It was a great night—and the young wife didn't mind at all. She was so proud! . . . .

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Old Valentines.

EDWIN—A crude drawing of a heart colored with red crayon . . . Underneath printed in big wobbly letters, "To My Valentine." He had handed it to her boldly at recess. ("I might marry you when I grow up if—if you don't have such a funny face then.") Whatever had become of Edwin? It was the first time she had remembered him in years. How she would like to see him again! Especially his wife.

* * * *

OTIS—The little lacy edged booklet with grimy corners brought a thrill even now . . . Whenever she saw Clark Gable in the movies she thought of Otis swaggering into the schoolroom in his boots and turtle necked sweater. She would get shaky kneed at sight of him . . . day-dreamed of him rescuing her from cows, snakes, irate turkey gobblers. He carried with him an air of being destined for romance . . . high adventure. He had become a policeman. Last week they had sent her from home a newspaper clipping with a picture of him and wife in the midst of their three sets of twins and new triplets.

* * * *

HAROLD—A bunch of blue forget-me-nots. She had pulled them out of a big red heart. "(Let these flowers blue, speak my love for you") He had planned to see the world before he settled down . . . to ship on a tramp steamer to South America . . . drop in on India and see the White Lhama . . . give the Geisha girls a rush ("a man's a fool to tie himself down before he's really lived"). Six months later she had gotten a letter from San Francisco. He had met Gracie on an excursion steamer . . . there had been a storm . . . they had gotten married and he was bringing Gracie home. He knew the two of them would be wonderful friends.

* * * *

TED—A smart little card with a verse "To a Pal." He had never expected to marry ("The trouble is I can't find what I'm looking for. If they've got brains, they haven't any looks; if they've got beauty, they haven't any sense"). Had listened to his confidences until he met Marjorie. ("She's really not dumb at all. She's got plenty of brains . . . it's just getting her to use 'em.") Well . . . Marjorie had not yet started using them.

* * * *

JERRY—A yellowed paper . . . the sonnet he had written her in that funny little restaurant he had taken her on the dollar she lent him. ("What's money? I could give you pearls and diamonds, but what would they mean? Some day we must go gypsying around the world together—you and I.") Disdained marriage. ("It's all right for ordinary people. An exceptional person doesn't need it.") Whatever had become of Jerry? She had heard somewhere that he had married a rich widow who set him up in the hotel business in Florida.

* * * *

WALTER—A small bunch of crushed violets. He had meant to send her perfume . . . or a dozen American Beauties . . . but the deal he was working on didn't go through. Some day though he was going to give her "things." (Just wait, darling, and you'll have a Hudson seal, too. Shall we go to Bermuda or the Riviera? You know, I think you would look lovely in pearls . . . that is, real pearls.") She had seen him last downtown two years ago when he was organizing a company to dig gold in South America. He had borrowed a nickel to telephone.

* * * *

ELBERT—A fragment of red ribbon. It had been on a basket of oranges and alligator pears he had sent. ("Fruit is more healthful than candy. The glucose in the sugar . . ."). Was looking for someone worthy of his name . . . a healthy girl of good stock . . . who did not drink . . . or smoke . . . or use lipstick. ("Five feet five is a good height . . . and around 135 pounds. I don't like 'em too thin.") The last she had heard, that youngest Van Oxley girl he had married was in Reno.

* * * *

MAURICE—An old letter . . . No use to read it again. ("The whole trouble is that I'm not integrated . . . can't buckle down to work . . . the psycho-analyist says that what I really need is to get married . . . so I thought . . .) It had come, oddly enough, on St. Valentine's Day. The modern message of love, she thought grimly . . . He had married his landlady's daughter six weeks later.

* * * *

Well anyway she had never taken Maurice really seriously. She had just met Bill then and . . . where on earth was Bill's Valentine?

She rummaged through the box . . . surely he had sent her one . . . sometime . . . in all these years . . . No, there was nothing. Well maybe it was in her old letters—No! She suddenly remembered! Bill had never sent her a Valentine! He had married her.

Philosopher Says Styles Of Sexes Converging

New York (AP).—Dr. Charles Shaw, New York University philosopher, thinks clothes are becoming a sort of meeting point between men and women. In his book of human progress, he views men's and women's styles as converging, "as though the sexes were seeking a common type of costume in order to promote a mutual understanding on at least a superficial basis." He says that styles from 1900 on represent an important feature of civilization's "pursuit of happiness."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Reno Divorcees Mostly Streamlined, Attorney Reveals.

By Ida Jean Kain.

FEBRUARY 14 . . . and Cupid is king for a day everywhere except in Reno. There the divorce business will proceed as usual and some beautiful petitioner will note the date in her diary as the one on which she received her decree.

Even in Reno the divorce will probably be followed by another marriage. The next husband is usually waiting just down the corridor and the bride-to-be trades her gardenias for orchids and says "I do" again.

Reno is so fascinating and its transient feminine population so glamorous that other women want to know all about them. There are no vital statistics on whether the average divorcee is blonde or brunette or streamlined or buxom, but the observations of a prominent divorce attorney confirm the impression that most of them are both streamlined and blonde. Some of them, he says, have assisted nature in the matter of coloring, and most are on a diet, Surprisingly enough, they are not the gold digger type. You might also be interested to know that the average age is 32.

Diets and Divorces.

There are more marriages in Reno than divorces. Now, since the women who get the divorces and marry the same day are practically always streamlined, what we want to know is whether this has any bearing on the divorce. Is it that these women are so beautiful that they can get married again, or could their streamlined beauty, indirectly, be the reason they are always losing their men?

You can, of course, draw any conclusions that please you. The overweight woman might be inclined to find a close connection between ultra-streamlines and the road to Reno. Certainly the woman who is always thinking of her figure can be very irritating to the man who has a weakness for deep dish apple pie.

No doubt overdieting is a factor in divorce. There is no denying that jumpy nerves and a nasty disposition—two undesirable results of a drastic diet—play their part in home breaking.

Neglect No Help.

It would, however, be very foolish to assume that neglect of your figure and your looks will help you to keep your husband. There is too much proof to the contrary! The smart woman is so clever about making herself lovely that her husband thinks it is all natural. She doesn't neglect her looks, but she doesn't neglect her man, either.

The main thing to remember is that neither your looks nor your health is improved by the continued addition of weight. Radiant health is the basis of both beauty and the happy disposition which makes beauty in the eyes of the beholder.

Superficial beauty in itself is not enough to make marriage last. It may help you to get another husband—but how about keeping the one you have?

Cloakroom comment during the Senate filibuster:

"The books some of the Southern Senators have been reading aloud in the Senate to string it along seem to be the first books they have read in years!"

• • • •

Within 30 minutes a tourist, slyly engaging the guard's attention, had purloined the President's card off the white ribbon.

Sentimental Senators have been taking advantage of the filibuster lull to prepare their valentines for today's fiesta of romance. Some of the newer members are disappointed to find that they can't distribute their tender messages wholesale to constituents free under senatorial frank.

The Senator who will receive the most valentines from colleagues today is Madame Hattie Caraway, of Arkansas, whose femininity survives politics.

After convincing Hitler that Germany needs a new embassy in a more fashionable Washington neighborhood, Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff apparently aren't destined to dwell in the new mansion . . . In diplomatic circles here there's a stage whisper that they're too Christian, not pagan enough.

"—valentines in a filibuster"

What convinced Hitler was a handful of snapshots with which the Dieckhoffs proved that the Nazi embassy is situated in a non-Aryan neighborhood, and none too Pagan; there's a Christian Church next door, and the Jewish community center is not far away.

If the highly intelligent, competent, likable Dieckhoffs do hang their hats in the new embassy when it's finished, it will be because Berlin hasn't been able to train a new crop of pagan diplomats, yet under Nazi auspices.

PAJAMA PORTRAITS—12

HENRY WALLACE

The pious, psychic Secretary of Agriculture is approximately as radical about agriculture as Chrysler is about automobiles or Schwab about steel. What's radical is the notion that a farmer, like a motor magnate, should know in advance how much will come off the production line and at what price . . . Like his forebears, Henry was a Republican—until 1932 . . . Like many shy men with a sense of humor, his comic sallies are bold and surprising . . . But he reserves them for intimates; strangers are apt to be flabbergasted . . . His radiant wife is a tremendous asset and stabilizer . . . His brain is probably the best among the 50 top New Dealers, but he is a bit naive about human relations . . . He is a bit skeptical about the conviction of his associates that he has Presidential possibilities, yet is willing to play ball with the idea; but not with his ideals. His new farm bill, which the Senate probably will pass at 3:30 today, is really an amendment to the Constitution, a new economic declaration of dependence.

HENRY WALLACE

If Washington weren't so sunny and balmy this winter, more of the Senators would be sneaking off to Florida during the filibuster . . . A few are making quick trips to the beaches incognito.

• • • •

"—hookey from the filibuster"

Some are getting in a little mid-winter golf at the links which ring the suburbs; others are catching up on their reading (one has actually chosen Lippmann's "The Good Society" as a bedtime story).

• • • •

The other day several left Bilbo, Bankhead and Connally potting feverishly at the anti-lynching bill and journeyed to Gettysburg and to Monticello, the shrine of Jefferson. "There are more arguments against the bill at Monticello than in the Senate," reported one.

• • • •

Two other Senators have been taking antibaldness treatments sub rosa at a hair expert's studios . . . They're more interested in antibaldness than antilynching.

Now the Southerners are pretending to be indignant because the Northern Senators won't sit around and listen to the filibuster; the average audience consists of 4 or 5 Senators.

Schools Deny 'Commercial' Film Shows

D. C. Principals Answer Charges Leading to Congress Inquiry.

Proceeds, 'if Any,' Go to Student Activity, Six Report.

Principals of six senior high schools said yesterday that the profits, if any, from movies shown at the schools go toward the support of student activities.

The question of whether the the schools are in the entertainment business came up when Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, announced that the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations would investigate complaints that a half-dozen public schools are being used for commercial motion picture shows and that children often use their lunch money to pay the admission. He said he had been told that some of the movies were below the educational standard and in some cases were obscene.

If the explanations of the six senior high school principals are indicative of what goes on in the rest of the system, however, it would appear that the schools are no rivals of Billy Rose, the Brothers Minsky or even the neighborhood picture houses.

Principal Lawrence G. Hoover, of Central High School, said that in an attempt to keep pupils from congregating in the corridors during the three lunch periods, the school has been showing animated cartoons and similar "shorts." An admission charge of five cents is made and the profit, which never exceeds $5 a day, goes to support school publications or other activities in need of financial aid.

At Western High School, the school paper, "The Breeze," has put on about six silent films since September as a method of raising revenue. Most of these are comedies and are shown during the lunch hour. In addition, according to Dr. Elmer S. Newton, principal, a demonstrator anxious to sell the school a motion-picture projecture has put on two movies this school year.

To rent the films, which were selected by teachers, an admission charge of 15 cents was levied at the first exhibition. Because of a disappointing attendance, the rate was cut to 10 cents.

Dr. Newton said that although the movies cleared about $20 for the student activities fund, the whole affair convinced him that a motion-picture projector would be a poor investment.

Frank C. Daniel, McKinley High School pincipal, declaed that movies had been discontinued at his school because (1) they weren't making any money and (2) distibutors refused to rent any more films. Before the showings were discontinued it had cost students 15 cents a head to ese such films as "David Copperfield," "Captains Courageous" and "Cruise of the Bounty."

Movies are shown every now and then at Eastern High School, according to Principal Charles Hart. The admission charge is 15 cents and the profit goes into the "general fund" for school activities. The last two films shown were "Captains Courageous" and "Lloyds of London." George Arliss is favorite.

Some two or three travelogues and animated cartoons have been shown at Woodrow Wilson High School since September, Principal Norman J. Nelson said. They are held during lunch periods on rainy days. The 5-cent admission fee sometimes brings the total "gate" to $8 or $9, which just about pays expenses.

Admission charges vary at Roosevelt High School, where travelogues and other educational films are put on once a week during the noon lunch period. Miss May P. Bradshaw, the principal, explained that sometimes tickets are sold at either 5 cents each or two for five.

Harry Brown to Speak At Meat Dealers' Rally

Harry Brown, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, will address a mass meeting of meat dealers and their employes, at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Government auditorium, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets on Constitution avenue.

The local branch of the American Institute of Packers, sponsors of tomorrow's meeting, will hold a session for consumers within the next month, it was announced.

D.C. Health Group Opens Fund Drive For Birth Control

MRS. MONTGOMERY BLAIR, Jr.

The Mothers Health Association, sponsor of local birth control clinics, yesterday announced a drive for funds to enlarge its progress.

"We are asking contributions to increase the number of clinic sessions, to broaden the scope of our work and purchase supplies for those who cannot pay," said Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice president of the drive.

"The tragically high maternal death rate in Washington shows how necessary it is to teach women to space their children and postpone or avoid pregnancy when they are not physically fit for motherhood," she said. Service includes advice by a woman physician and a trained nurse.

The association is an outgrowth of the Family Betterment Committee, formed to promote the George Washington University clinic. Last July it founded its present clinic at 715 E street southwest. The one weekly session held at the beginning since has increased to one evening and three daytime clinic sessions.

Suffrage Group Plans Rally of 1,000 Delegates

Representatives of Other Groups to Be Asked to Mass Meeting.

Preparations for a mass meeting to urge suffrage for District citizens got under way yesterday at first session of the arrangements committee of the District Suffrage Association.

Gathered at the Annapolis Hotel, more than 150 members elected temporary chairmen to arrange for a mass meeting March 18 which is expected to draw 1,000 representatives of civic, labor and business organizations desiring some kind of voting privilege for Washingtonians.

Assembling under banners demanding in large letters, "Votes For the People, By The People and Of The People," members agreed to exert every effort to make the March rally "the most effective effort ever attempted by District citizens to obtain their constitutional rights."

Advocating no specific form of suffrage, the association will concentrate on an attempt to affectuate the mass meeting with a view to evolving a program suitable to a majority of District citizens.

Committee chairmen elected at the meeting were: Donald T. Sheehan, publicity; Charles Franklin, program; Mrs. Donald E. Montgomery, membership, and Karl Gerber, finance.

Church Faces 5 Problems, Says Stokes

Race Friction, Economic Security Among Issues Stressed by Canon.

Rejection of Christ Endangers Society, Priest Warns.

Race friction, lack of economic security, child labor, international quarrels are among the matters that definitely concern the Church, declared Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, speaking at Washington Cathedral yesterday.

Modern man is presented with five possible ways of following Christ: Ecclesiastical, theological, social, ethical and religious, Canon Stokes said.

"Each has great importance, for all go back to Christ, but if any one is emphasized to the exclusion of the others, that is a serious danger," he asserted.

Stressing the vital importance of each of the five methods of following Christ, Canon Stokes pointed out that a strong Church is necessary to fight the organized forces of materialism and the Communistic forces of atheism.

On the theological side, he said, the creed gives a clear view of God and man, a point on which one can base his life.

The social method of following Christ, by giving attention to the ills of society, also is highly desirable, Canon Stokes declared. Referring to a recent report that one-sixth of the population of New York City is supported by some form of charity, he asserted that the Church is interested in preventing such calamities.

Need for integrity in private and public life is expressed in the ethical way of following Christ, he said. Religion is also important, he concluded, so that men will possess detachment and inspiration.

Blaming the "widespread rejection of Christ" for the principal dangers to modern society, the Rev. Lawrence Shehan, of St. Patrick's Church, declared yesterday afternoon that "Christian morality is the only sound foundation" for the social structure.

Father Shehan, who gave the first of a series of sermons from the pulpit of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, listed the three chief evils of the day as "the lack of any commonly accepted moral code, the steady disintegration of family life and the rapid growth of hatred between nation and nation, between class and class."

"The seeds of these evils always have been present," Father Shehan said, "but until growth of unbelief in modern times, they had their antidote and check."

The Lithuanian Minister and Mrs. Zadeikis, and the Lithuanian Society attended the 10:15 a. m. service, in honor of the Lithuanian national festival. Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Joseph Gedra, and the Rev. John A. Cartwright, pastor, delivered the sermon.

Speaking on the text, "Behold, I make all things new," the Right Rev. Joseph W. Hunkin, D. D., lord bishop of Truro, delivered the sermon yesterday at St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector, presided.

Bishop Hunkin offered a plea for "doing something worth doing" amidst the uncertainties of life. Pointing out that in Great Britain, as well as the United States, there is much unrest, he asked his audience to recognize that, amidst the good things of life, there are many elements of present-day existence which "we must work to eradicate."

Bishop Hunkin, who was formerly dean of Caius College, Cambridge, visited Virginia Seminary, Alexandria, Friday, and conferred with professors there. His voyage to the United States is in connection with the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Evangelical Education Society, which was celebrated last week in Philadelphia.

Narcotics Pay For China War, Author Asserts

Sale of Drugs to U.S. Helps Finance Japan's Army, Rowell Declares.

Earl Albert Rowell, author and lecturer, charged last night that narcotics are financing both Japan's invasion of China and the Japanese armament program.

Rowell, in an address at the Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park, Md., said the money to finance Japanese armies in China was coming largely from sale of narcotics in Russia, the United States, and China.

"Japan has been issuing for years huge bond issues to put her navy on a par with that of England and the United States. The sole security for these bonds has been the anticipated revenue from the sale of narcotics."

Rowell said that Japanese aviators have been dropping circulars over the five northern districts of China urging the natives to grow the opium poppy, instead of rice and other crops.

Narcotic shipments from Japan to the United States are on the increase, he said. During the past three years the total amount of narcotics seized on the Pacific Coast has been equal to all seizures for the preceding 12 years, Rowell charged.

"At present 85 per cent of the narcotics seized are from Japan, whereas five years ago only 5 per cent of the total came from Japan," he declared.

Rowell said that the danger of imported narcotics was outweighed in the United States by home-grown marihuana. He said that in one metropolitan school 5 per cent of the students smoked marihuana cigarettes. More than 60 per cent of the addicts are young, ranging from 14 to 24 years, he said.

America on Threshold of Its Golden Age, Says Untermeyer

Poet and Critic Sees Nation Approaching Cultural Maturity; Addresses Audience of 500 at Town Hall Meeting Here.

"America is approaching cultural maturity and stands on the threshold of its Golden Age," according to Louis Untermeyer, distinguished poet and critic.

Reciting the foibles of an epoch from which he sees America emerging, Untermeyer last night delighted a Town Hall audience of 500 with his dissection of the Nation's literary tastes.

American reading has been chiefly motivated by the desire to escape from "what is real and predictable," he said.

"Fifty per cent of our literature has been founded on four basic fairy-tale formulas — "Cinderella," "The Disinherited Son," "Beauty and the Beast" and another I have forgotten."

"The Tarzan books are one of America's six leading industries and Edgar Rice Burroughs must certainly be one of our sixty families."

But a growing minority of American readers, Untermeyer believes, are choosing the books which lead to "a new awareness of life, with all its multiple complexities."

These books are distinguished from the Tarzan saga and others of the fairy tale school by the presence between their covers of "real people," he said.

"We read great novels not only to be diverted, but to touch greatness, to have our lives enriched."

"Our contemporary novel may seem harsh and ugly," he conceded, "but they are vigorous, vivid and, above all, American. We should be proud of this literature and as hospitable to it as we have been in the past to importations from Europe."

There never will be "the great American novel," Untermeyer predicted, because "we have too many countries here in the United States. We must not look for a single recorder, but for rich variety and contradiction."

"Gone With the Wind," according to the speaker, "appealed uncannily to the desire both for reality and escape. It is essentially unrealistic because it poses no problem for us. It takes us back to an old war, not the last one or the next one."

Store Clerks Get $17 Scale Today

A wage of $17 for a "recognized working week" of 40 to 48 hours goes into effect today for female employes of District retail stores. Estimates of the number of workers to whom the minimum applies range from 8,000 to 15,000.

Mrs. William Kittle, representative of the public on the Minimum Wage Board, said last night that, according to some figures, 45 per cent of women retail clerks in the District have been receiving less than $16.50 a week. The new rate of $17 applies to all female employes except learners.

Autoist Held, Denies Crash Fatal to Man

Rites for Ex-Official of Tennessee to Be Today.

Motorcycle Policeman Hurt; Nurse's Car Hits Trolley.

Martin Bray, 30, 2314 Park place southeast, was held at First Precinct Station last night pending a coroner's investigation of the death of a man allegedly struck by Bray's automobile.

Bray surrendered at the Eleventh Precinct early yesterday after George W. Sutton, New York and Washington attorney, was struck at Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. The automobile failed to stop at the scene of the accident.

Sutton was standing in a safety zone when he was hit. He died of a fractured skull, two broken legs, and severe cuts. His body was knocked 60 feet by the impact.

A hit-run driver ran down 10-year-old Robert Doyle in front of his home at 821 I street southeast. Bray was questioned by police on this case, too.

The Doyle boy was not seriously injured and was released from Providence Hospital after receiving first aid.

Bray yesterday denied knowledge of having killed anyone. He told Detective Sergt. William Liverman that he remembered being in an accident but said he did not know he struck Sutton. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Policeman Herbert C. Wright, 31, of the Twelfth Precinct, was treated at Casualty Hospital for lacerations and bruises when his motorcycle was struck from behind on Bladensburg road northeast near South Dakota avenue.

Leroy W. Decker, 22, 1105 Fifteenth street northwest, was charged with reckless driving in connection with the accident. He was released on $300 bond.

Miss Agnes C. Broderick, of 2422 North Capitol street, a nurse, was injured last night when her automobile collided with a street car in the 2100 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast. At Casualty Hospital her injuries were said to be not serious.

According to Policeman E. E. Devey, Miss Broderick appeared to be ill just before the crash. He said he heard her brakes suddenly applied, and then saw the automobile move into the path of the street car. The nurse was alone.

Police Officer to Speak.

Capt. Edward Kelly, of the Eighth Precinct, will speak at the February meeting of the Alice Deal Home and School Association in the school auditorium this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. He will discuss "rainy day" traffic problems.

Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Joe Cronin Bought From Kansas City for $7,500; Harris, Released, Goes to Detroit; Walter Johnson Named New Manager of Nationals.

Chapter Thirty.

CLARK GRIFFITH PITCHED TEN YEARS in the big league before his earnings totaled $30,000. At the end of the 1925 season, he rewarded Manager Bucky Harris with a contract that called for $30,000 per year for the seasons of 1926-27-28.

Those years, since 1920, had been lush seasons, financially, for the Washington Club. But, until the 1924 World Series dumped nearly $150,000 into the club's treasury, Griffith was carrying only a trifling cash balance. The improvement of the Washington ball park was a near-passion with the "Old Fox," whose ambition was to make Griffith Stadium a show place of the big leagues.

He refurbished the Washington plant completely, building an upper deck on both the right and left field stands. A total of $672,000 he poured into improvements of the park between 1920 and 1924. The erection of the concrete bleachers in 1921, which added 9,900 seats to the park, called for an outlay of $115,000.

During the same period, Griffith spent $450,000 for players, with his $50,000 purchase of Earl McNeeley representing the greatest single outlay.

Harris finished fourth with the Nats in 1926 and the next season, Griffith, who visioned another pennant, hired Tris Speaker to play the outfield at a $30,000 salary. It was Speaker who inspired the trade that sent Buddy Myer to Boston. "If we had a veteran shortstop, we could win the pennant," Speaker counseled Harris. "Topper" Rigney, of the Red Sox, would fill the bill," he added. Harris made the trade. The Nats won no pennant, finishing third to the Yankees and Athletics.

In July, 1928, Joe Engel, the Nats' scout, advised Griffith that he was on the trail of "a kid shortstop," whom Pittsburgh had turned back to the minor leagues. Kansas City, which had the boy, was about to turn him over to Wichita and he could be bought cheaply, Engel told Griffith. He received the order to buy him. Kansas City hiked the price upon learning that the Nats were interested in the lad and Engel was forced to pay $7,500 for his contract.

Cronin Reports for Duty and Meets His Future Wife.

THE CHAP HE BOUGHT WAS JOE CRONIN, in whose gangling awkwardness Engel somewhere had spotted a spark of talent.

Cronin was dumbfounded when Engel told him he had been bought by Washington.

"You're kidding," said the 21-year-old infielder. "Why, they told me I was ticketed for Wichita."

"You were," said Engel," but you're in the big leagues now. We're taking the next train. Pack your clothes."

"I don't have any clothes, except what I'm wearing," Cronin remarked.

"No clothes? Why not?"

"Well, you see, I've been sending all my money to my mother in Frisco. I don't need many clothes."

Engel ran an appraising eye up and down Cronin's figure. "Never mind about the clothes. Mine'll fit you. I've got too many anyway. We're off for Washington tonight."

CLARK GRIFFITH and Joe Cronin, on the day that the "Old Fox" turned the reins of manager over to his sparkling shortstop.

Engel chaperoned Cronin into Griffith's office two days later. At the first desk, he paused to greet a comely, black-eyed girl. Mildred Robertson, Griffith's niece, was also his secretary.

The girl smiled at Engel, then looked inquiringly at his companion.

"Beg your pardon, Mildred," said Engel. "I guess introductions are in order. I've brought you a sweetheart. His name's Joe Cronin."

In the midst of a blush that would make a bonfire look anemic, Cronin managed to blurt out "pleased to meetcha" to the girl who was to be his wife six years later, after a wedding ceremony that was to be first-page news.

Griffith Releases Harris—Johnson Becomes Nat Manager.

THE YANKEES WERE SETTING too fast a pace for the Nats during that season of 1928. Bucky Harris' team was never a serious contender, though it finished fourth. "The Old Fox" was disturbed, not alone by the Nats' failure.

Wolfish Washington fans had begun, that season, to boo Bucky Harris. His marriage to a Senator's daughter had inspired the rumor that Harris had gone "high hat." His play at second base had slowed and, for three seasons now, the club had failed to win a pennant. The "boy wonder" of 1925-26 was no longer an idol. Washington fans, spoiled by his earlier successes, were beginning to find fault with Harris.

Griffith was genuinely pained at the condition. Harris remained his ideal as a manager, but "The Old Fox" did not care to see Bucky subjected to such consistent booing. His admiration for Harris had increased, in fact, when he noted the gameness with which his manager had endured the fans' criticism.

Griffith sought Harris out at the finish of the season. "Bucky," he said, "Don't get me wrong. You can have another contract as the Washington manager, if you like. But conditions here are bad for you. The fans are on your neck, as you know. It looks as if it'll last. If you want a job in another town in the league, I think I can get one for you."

"Thanks, Griff," said Bucky. "I don't like to run out when things are breaking bad. But what you say is true enough. Is there another manager's job open?"

"There's a job for you at Detroit. Frank Navin wants you. I felt him out on the subject a month ago. He'll make the salary right."

"I'll take it," said Harris. Then, deeply appreciative, he gulped, "Thanks for what you've done. Some day I want to work for you again."

During the winter of 1928-29, Griffith appointed Walter Johnson manager of the Nats, gaining his release from a two-year contract as manager at Newark.

Johnson's first act of office was to regain Buddy Myer from Boston, where he had starred at various infield posts for two years. Griffith agreed to turn over to the Red Sox pitchers Milton Gaston and Horace Lisenbee, infielders Bobby Reeves and Grant Gillis and outfielder Elliot Bigelow.

Kuhel Bought for $65,000—Cronin Takes the Reins.

"THERE'S NO LAW AGAINST rectifying a mistake," said Griffith at the time. "We never should have traded Myer." The five players sent by the Nats to Boston in the Myer deal originally cost Griffith $85,000.

The four-year regime of Johnson was marked chiefly by the Nats' feat in finishing second in 1930 and the purchase, in the same season, of First Baseman Joe Kuhel from Kansas City.

Joe Judge was aging and the self-styled "Whattaman" Art Shires did not loom as a capable successor at first base. Griffith dispatched Scout Engel on a tour of the country for first-base talent. He returned to report that only two first basemen in the minors captured

Turiello, Lucas Battle In Arena Feature Bout

Italian Is 7-5 Favorite Over Camden Veteran in 10-Round Go.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Signor Saverio Turiello, who takes punches at people for a livelihood, and Johnny Lucas, of Camden, meet tonight in the battle-pit at Turner's Arena in a ten-round bout that may ultimately lead the winner to a shot at welterweight champion Barney Ross.

Fresh from a highly successful invasion of Mexico City, Turiello will enter the ring a 7-5 favorite and with precious little Lucas money in sight. The swarthy Italian stylist has an impressive string of victories to his credit and appears to be too strong and clever for his opponent.

Those who are supporting their faith in Camden Johnny with sound, U. S. currency, harbor an idea that he may be too "cute" for the Italian. The bald veteran has been around a long time, knows all the tricks and is noted for his ability to squeeze out of embarrasing situations.

Lucas a Spoiler.

Lucas also boasts a small reputation as a spoiler, a man who fights best when the going is toughest, and this angle has not been overlooked by those wagering a few bobs on him. He whipped "Battling" Burroughs in his last appearance here, and made it look easy. And he accepted that fight on two days' notice. Tonight, after several weeks of intensive training, Lucas should be in better condition and able to give a good account of himself.

Turiello conducts himself like an honest-to-goodness contender for the world title in the ring. A strong little fellow, with plenty of persuasion in both fists, he likes to mix it, and bulls the boys around as much as possible. He can box, knows how to feint and why, and he hits hard enough to put Mr. Lucas in the hay if he gets a clean shot at him.

Shooting for Ross.

The promise of a bout with Ross here in the summer if he gets by Lucas tonight, and possibly one more opponent, is strong bait for the likable Italian. He likes the idea "vera mooch," and will spare no powder in an effort to clinch the match.

Bob Wilson, one-time featured performer at the old Riding and Hunt Club Arena, tangles with "Toots" Bernstein in a six-round semifinal. If Wilson should win he has been promised a bout with George Abrams.

Four-round preliminaries involve Mike Morton vs. Johnny Quinn, Joe Skibo vs. Rusty Baker and Maynard Daniels vs. Bill Marino.

JOHNNY LUCAS.

Chicago Boy Wins N. A. A. Skating Title

Vic Ronchetti Scores Surprising Victory in Speed Events.

By the Associated Press.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Vic Ronchetti, an unheralded Chicago youth, and husky 18-year-old Janet Milne, of Saranac Lake, today captured the senior North American amateur speed skating championships.

Ronchetti assured himself of the men's senior title when he placed third in the half-mile final, the opening event on today's card, and established his right to the crown beyond all doubt when he won the gruelling 5-mile finale of the three-day program.

Ronchetti finished with a total of 150 points, 80 more than the 70 garnered by his nearest competitor, Eddie Schroeder, of Chicago, the defending champion.

3 Tie For Third Place.

Bernie Cannata, also of Chicago; Tommy Smith, of Utica, N. Y., and Don Johnson, of Minneapolis, ended in a third-place deadlock with 40 each.

Like Ronchetti, Miss Milne clinched her women's championship when she finished third in the mile, more than 30 yards behind the winner, Mrs. Eleanor Thiel Dyer, of Chicago. Miss Edna Hanley, of Staten Island, N. Y., finished in the runner-up spot with 80 points, while Mrs. Dyer was third with 70.

Other champions in the various divisions were: Intermediate, Joe Kuezeck, Fort Johnson, N. Y.; junior boys, Clayton Whitney, jr., Troy, N. Y.; juvenile boys, Arthur Bulrice, Saranac Lake; boys under 12, Tommy Stanton, Newburgh, N. Y.; under 16 girls, Geraldine Nuhfer, Cleveland, and under 10 boys, Jimmy Lamy, Saranac Lake, and Dave Davigon, Lake Placid.

Ronchetti supplied the greatest thrill of the meet when he took the 5-mile event in a finish that brought the big crowd to its feet.

Victory by Inches.

His margin of victory over Schroeder was a matter of inches. Laying well back in the pack for the greater portion of the race, Ronchetti, on the bell lap, answered Schroeder's challenge with an electrifying burst of speed that carried him to the tape in a desperate driving finish.

Ronchetti's triumph was all the more remarkable considering that finished Friday's card with a mere 20 points. He swept Saturday's three races, however, a feat that virtually assured him of the championship.

Tommy Smith, the Utica schoolboy, who ranked with Schroeder as one of the pre-meet favorites, faded after his opening-day victory in the 220. His third in Saturday's 2-mile was his only other place.

Miss Milne, in winning the women's title, annexed her sixth successive championship of the season. Previously, she had gained women's senior honors in the Middle Atlantic, Eastern States, Capital District, Northville and Mohawk Valley meets.

Wells Breaks Sled Record

Three Bobsledders Hurt in Bad Spill.

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 13 (AP).—Aubrey (Bucky) Wells continued his record-breaking series of dashes down the Mount Van Hoevenberg run today to win the National A. A. U. senior four-man bobsled title after one entry crashed in a trial heat, injuring three riders.

Wells, Keene Valley gas shovel operator, drove the four one-mile heats in 4 minutes 36.64 seconds, wiping out the old mark of 4:39.30 established in 1936 by Katherine Dewey, of Lake Placid.

Two hundred spectators, at Shady Corner, saw Curtis P. Stevens go into a bad skid in a trial heat.

The crew clung desperately as the sled skidded at right angles for 250 feet on the closely-set poles that fence the 14-foot perpendicular ice walls guarding the treacherous turn.

Stevens wrenched the quarterton sled back into the track but three crew members were thrown to the bottom of the run. The pilot made a sensational solo dash to the foot of the run, falling safely from the sled as it slowed on the uphill finish.

Walter Morrison, brakeman, and Edward White, both of Lake Placid, were taken to the General Hospital. Morrison suffered a broken hand and nose and a possible skull fracture, doctors said. White was bruised and sustained a fractured arm.

Hugh Varno, fourth man of the crew, was thrown clear and escaped serious injury but suffered bruises.

Easton Baseball Fans Raise Funds for Club

Easton, Md., Feb. 13 (AP).—Easton baseball fans began a campaign today to raise funds for construction of stands and bleachers at the Eastern Shore League park here.

Talbot County donated grounds for the park and Easton agreed to furnish lights for night baseball. The club will repay the city in installments.

Lloyd Brown Beaten In Sarasota Finals, 3-2

Sarasota, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP).—Don Newburn won the Sarasota City golf championship for the ninth time today and then announced his retirement from future competition in the annual tournament.

The Sarasota player defeated Lloyd Brown, St. Paul pitcher, 3 and 2, in the 36-hole final round. In the second flight, J. H. Dink, of Sarasota, downed Billy Sullivan, St. Louis Browns catcher, 1 up.

Young Pitcher Named Manager of Cambridge

Cambridge, Md., Feb. 13 (AP).—Joseph S. Fowler, president of the Cambridge club of the Eastern Shore Baseball League, announced today appointment of Joe DaVis, Petersburg, Pa., Pitcher, as manager for this season.

Davis, only 23, has been playing professional baseball for four years. Last year he managed Midland, Texas; in the west Texas-New Mexico League, and Monett in the Arkansas-Missouri League.

Newark Five Defeated by Local Pros

Hebrew Club Is Beaten, 49-35; D. C. Team Leads Series.

By Jack Munhall.

Heurich's professional cagers cut loose with a withering barrage of baskets in the final period yesterday to drub Newark Hebrew Club, 49-35, before 600 spectators in Heurich gym. By its victory the Brewers took a 2-1 advantage in the season's series, which was continued with a contest in Newark last night.

Unlike the previous two meetings, which found one and two points separating the teams at the finish, yesterday's game was close only in the first two 15-minute periods It was the first time Heurich has beaten the strong New Jersey invader here.

Two weeks ago, Newark smashed Heurich's six-game winning streak in a sensational game, decided, 37-36, after three extra sessions. That night, however, Heurich evened honors by grabbing a thrilling 38-36 triumph in Newark; a basket by Whitney Wilson with two seconds to play settling the issue.

Gets Able Assistance.

The same Wilson, receiving able assistance from Militant Milt Schoenfeld, was the lad who led Heurich's last-period assault. After matching point for point in the opening few minutes, Heurich dropped behind as Herb Cohen, Newark's one-hand specialist, sailed in three rapid baskets. With Cohen, who even tosses free throws with one paw, leading the way, Newark was in the van, 16-13, at the end of the quarter.

Meanwhile Heurich's uncanny accuracy at sinking foul shots was keeping it in the game. The Brewers made nine of ten charity throws during the battle. In the second quarter, Heurich seized the lead for the first time since Ralph Bennie opened the game with a foul heave, when Schoenfeld slipped in a set shot from the side to make the count 22-20. Otis Zahn previously had deadlocked the score at 20-20.

Heurich Holds Lead.

Once in possession of the lead, Heurich never yielded it, being in front, 27-26, at the end of the second period. Then came the closing drive, which found the Brewers pocketing eight field goals and a free throw while holding Newark scoreless. Conspicuous in this surge were the brilliant performances of Wilson and Schoenfeld. The former tallied three baskets, the latter four. Not until the new Heurich clock revealed only three minutes to play did the Hebrews find the net again.

Then they rang up the final 5 points of the game on baskets by Carl Schiffer and a foul shot by Cohen. Schiffer and Cohen, with 13 and 9 points, incidentally, were Newark's leading point gatherers. High-scoring honors were taken by Schoenfeld with 15. Wilson followed with 10.

In a preliminary game, Fort Myer defeated United Clay Products, 43-38, in an upset.

Three Cup League Games on Tonight

The most important league games of the second half of the Heurich Cup League take place tonight at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D streets, northwest.

Regal Clothiers, leading the league, will tangle with Bureau of Investigation, first half winners, at 9:30 in the feature game. Investigation is right on Regal's heels, and a victory for the G-Men may change the complexion of the league.

Lubeseal, another top challenger, meets Little Tavern at 8:30 and United Clay Products takes on D. C. Fire Department at 7:30.

Wednesday Night's Schedule.
7:30, Naval Hospital vs. Treasury.
8:30, D. C. Fire Department vs. Marines.
9:00, Senate vs. United Clay Products.

Friday Night.
7:30, Lubeseal vs. D. C. Fire Department.
8:30, Naval Hospital vs. United Clay.
9:30, D. & H. vs. Fort Myer.

Foord Vs. Neusel.

Hamburg, Germany, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Ben Foord, South African heavyweight, today signed to fight Walter Neusel, of Germany, here on April 16. Foord recently was outpointed in 12 rounds by former champion Max Schmeling.

A Sure Sign of Spring

Baseball's Advance Guard Heads for Dixieland to Prepare for Another Stand Under Big Top.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—This is the week old man winter starts a fast and early fadeout for Mr. Gus Q. baseball player.

The time has come for the pitchers, catchers, managers and magnates to trade such things as winter overcoats, hunting rifles and hotstove cracker barrels for tickets to somewhere in Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, California or, if it concerns the Chicago Cubs, Catalina Island. Lots of them are either at their training camps already, or are on the way there as fast as they can make tracks.

While a lot of us stay up North, wrapped to the chin in woolens and well-supplied with aspirin, there'll be a considerably more fortunate party of New York Giants (who can take their winter or leave it alone) shoving off Tuesday night for Hot Springs, Ark. Two catchers and five pitchers will be in the party.

At the spa, they'll pick up Cliff Melton, who pulled in earlier. The whole bunch will stop off for several days of thawing out process before getting along to the National League champions' training camp at Baton Rouge, La., where Coach Pancho Snyder is already getting things in readiness for the arrival of the batterymen, February 28.

Tigers in Camp.

Or if it's Florida you want to hear about, consider Mickey Cochrane and such of his Detroit Tigers as Elden Auker, "Schooldboy" Rowe, Hank Greenberg, Jojo White and Billy Rogell who are already at their Lakeland camp, although the Detroits aren't scheduled there until March 6.

Or shed a tear for Jimmy Dykes. Manager James packed up a store of those two-by-six black cigars with which he's wont to cloud the atmosphere and hopped a train for the White Sox camp at Pasadena. He started out from his bowling alleys about a week ago, and is probably looking at the view of Central America around the Panama Canal right now.

Jimmy and Mickey aren't the only ones who are stealing a march on the weather and the calendar. Manager Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals decided yesterday it was time either to get a new overcoat or get somewhere it would not be needed. So he left the Frisch residence at New Rochelle, N. Y., and headed for the Gashouse Gang's layout at St. Petersburg, where he'll find Gashouse Gangster No. 1, Ducky Medwick, there before him. Clark Griffith isn't called the "Old Fox" for nothing. He knew warmer places than Washington, so he's down at his Nationals' camp at Orlando.

Bob Feller Heads South.

Bob Feller, who's a young fellow and shouldn't mind the mercury dropping around Van Meter, Iowa, starts driving in his big new car today in the general direction of Miami, before moving over to the Cleveland camp at New Orleans. General Manager Billy Evans is getting the Red Sox camp ready at Sarasota, while Manager Joe Cronin and Jimmy Foxx have started conditioning at Hot Springs, Va.

As a group, the Giants are the earliest under way this year, with their trek to Hot Springs, but as usual, Connie Mack and his Athletics start the ball rolling so far as training camp squads are concerned. The venerable leader leaves Philadelphia next Saturday with his pitchers and catchers and will open the Lake Charles, La., camp February 22. From then on, the various clubs will be checking in and opening things up almost daily. Here's the list:

Philadelphia Athletics, February 23, Lake Charles, La.
Boston Bees, February 24, Bradenton, Fla.
Chicago Cubs, February 24, Catalina Island.
Phillies, February 21, Biloxi, Miss.
Cincinnati, February 26, Tampa, Fla.
New York Yankees, February 27, St. Petersburg, Fla.
Washington, February 27, Orlando, Fla.
Cleveland, February 27, New Orleans.
New York Giants, February 28, Baton Rouge, La.
St. Louis Cardinals, March 2, St. Petersburg, Fla.
Boston Red Sox, March 3, Sarasota, Fla.
Chicago White Sox, March 3, Pasadena, Calif.
Brooklyn, March 4, Clearwater, Fla.
Pittsburgh, March 5, San Bernardino, Calif.
Detroit, March 6, Lakeland, Fla.
St. Louis Browns, March 7, San Antonio, Tex.

Southerner Scores A One-in-the-Pocket

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 13 (AP).—It may have been a pocket-in-one or one-in-the-pocket. Certainly it was one in a million. George C. Baird was playing the 171-yard sixth hole of the Augusta Country Club golf course.

Suddenly he felt a tug on his shirt front. Looking down, he discovered a ball in his shirt pocket. Rufus Mullen had pulled his tee shot.

Bobby Riggs Wins Handily

Defeats Charles Harris in Everglades Event.

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 13.—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, pulled his favorite stunt of playing just hard enough to win as he defeated Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, in five sets today in the Everglades Club tennis tournament final.

The scores: 6—0, 6—3, 3—6, 4—6, 6—1.

Riggs opened up like a house afire by making only two errors and allowing his opponent only three placements in the first set. In the second he let Harris draw even at 3-all before putting on the pressure to run out the set in love games.

Harris found his range in the third set with particularly strong backhand and overhand strokes and benefited in the fourth as Riggs' half-hearted returns frequently found the net.

The Chicago youth, top-seeded in the tournament and the Nation's second-ranking player, came to life in the final set when he found himself in danger of losing. With a complete reversal of form Riggs retrieved everything Harris poked at him and passed the Floridian on almost every attempt he made to come to the net.

It was Riggs' fourth winter tournament victory in five starts, his only loss being to Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, in the Miami Biltmore.

Skating Leaders.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 13 (AP).—The fast-skating Canadian and Polish teams remained in the undefeated class today as they won their second straight clashes in the world amateur hockey championship tournament.

Pitcher Van Atta Asks Just One More Chance.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb 13 (AP).—Russell Van Atta, left-handed pitcher who returned a contract offering what he called a "bat boy's salary," has a proposition to make the St. Louis Browns.

"All I'm asking is this," he said. "If workouts in spring training show that my arm is okay, I expect the same salary I received last year.

"If a test reveals I'm through as a pitcher, then in all fairness to the club and myself I will give up baseball."

Hard luck has dogged Van Atta since the winter of 1933 when his pitching hand was burned in a fire that destroyed his Lake Mohawk, N. J., home. He was with the New York Yankees then, and winning his share of games.

Last season Van Atta took part in 16 games with the Browns, winning one and losing two, before he underwent an operation for removal of a growth from the elbow of his throwing arm.

Now what he asks is "an opportunity to show the club I'm back in form. I believe my arm is in the pink again."

Van Atta will be on hand when the St. Louis Cardinals start spring training here.

I'm going to work out with the Cardinals for a few days to see how the old soup bone is working," he said. I haven't even tried to throw a pebble in six months. I'm anxious to see how the arm has responded to treatment.

"The way I feel now, I think I could pitch both ends of a double-header any day of the week. The pain I suffered last season is gone."

Texan Wins 'Frisco Play By 4 and 3

Takes $1,000 Top Prize Over West Virginian in 36-Hole Final.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—Jimmy Demaret, a bad weather golfer if this section ever saw one, captured the $5,000 San Francisco match play open tournament today with a 4-and-3 victory over Sam Snead, of West Virginia, in the 36-hole finals.

The Texas links tornado—he was born, reared and learned his golf in Houston—produced a consistent and remarkable game in the face of the worst weather conditions ever prevailing for a major tournament in this part of the country.

He won the first hole with a birdie 4 and led his long-hitting rival from that time on. He was 3 up at the 9th, 2 up at the halfway mark, 3 up again at the 27th and pulled out by a decisive margin by taking a par 4 on the 33d, finishing hole of the finals.

Demaret carded a 35-40—75 for the morning round, compared with par figures of 36-35—71 for the sporty San Francisco Club course, a multi-bunkered layout requiring the most accurate kind of shotmaking. He was eight strokes over standard figures when the man-to-man battle of strokes, fought out in rain, wind and spongy turf, ended.

Snead Was Favorite.

Snead, winner of the Miami Open, the Nassau and Del Mar tournaments during the winter swing which started last December, teed off as the established favorite. His opponent, Texas P. G. A. champion, never had won a competition of the caliber of the San Francisco Open, which attracted most of the "big names" of the sport.

When they turned the twenty-seventh hole, however, it was mild mannered Demaret who loomed as the certain winner.

He halved the twenty-eighth in bogey 5s, and won the twenty-ninth with a bogey 4, when Snead drove into the woods and three putted on the green, missing a two footer for the half.

The Texan lost the thirtieth to Snead's birdie 3, gained through a 40-foot putt, then halved the thirty-first in par 3 and the thirty-second in par 4. But he took the thirty-third and the match with a par 4 against Snead's theoretical 6. Snead hooked his drive into the woods and conceded the victory to Demaret who was on the green in 2.

Navy Faces Busy Week

Cage Games With Temple, C. U. Feature Sports Card.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Feb. 13.—The Naval Academy faces a busy sports schedule this week. The chief interest attaches to the basketball games with Temple on Wednesday and Catholic University on Saturday, the last contests in that line before the service match, which will take place at West Point on the 26.

Temple, leader of the strong Eastern Conference, has a team which averages 6 feet 4 inches and Navy will do well to hold the visitors to a close score.

The contest with Catholic University renews basketball relations with that team, after a lapse of some years. Many close games have been played between the two teams in the past.

The Navy will be minus the services of Frank Lynch, its tall center, this week, though he may be available against the Army. His place is being taken by George Ghesquiere.

Coach Wilson has put Bob Laney back at guard and is again using Bob Gillette at forward. Capt. Alan McFarland is the other forward, and Jack Mansfield the other regular guard.

Although the Navy boxers end their season at Syracuse, there will be five varsity and five plebe events at home, making up the largest bill of the local winter season.

In addition to the basketball with Catholic, the varsity wrestlers will meet Harvard, the fencers, Cornell, the swimmers, Columbia and the small bore riflemen Yale.

The plebe bill for the day is as follows: Wrestling, with Blair Academy; fencing with Penn Charter School, swimming with Baltimore City College, boxing with the University of Virginia freshmen and gymnastics with Emerson High School, of Union City, N. J.

Golf Champions Open Meet Today

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP).—Charles Whitehead, 1936 New Jersey amateur champion from Plainfield, will tee off here tomorrow in defense of his national championship of golf club champions title.

Approximately 80 golfers representing a dozen States were expected to enter the qualifying round.

The qualifying round tomorrow will be over the 18-hole route. The 36-hole finals are slated for Saturday.

This Morning

The Eddie Smiths Win Dance; May Go Far.

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation this column will be written by Walter Haight.)

Don't be surprised if you read in Hedda Hopper's column some morning that Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey, and his petite, young wife have signed movie contracts. Chances are that Eddie will not ride the winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, but there is a large gold trophy of horse and rider on display in the Smith apartment at Pasadena.

HAIGHT.

The Smiths (she is the former Florence Potelet, a Capital girl), turned back all opposition in winning the foxtrot championship of California from a field of jockeys and their wives and girl friends. It was a long, tough grind, writes one of Eddie's friends, but the Smiths showed they could go the distance.

In taking down the title, the Smiths had as their most ardent rivals, the Alfred Robertsons (he is the former C. V. Whitney rider now with the Milky Way Stable). The Robertsons were beaten a mere "Susie Que," despite the fact that Bill Crosby and his wife, Dixie Lee, virtually rooted themselves into submission. The Robertsons won it last year and were defending their title.

The event hardly could be called the "Big Apple," due to the small competitors. In fact, my informant writes, now that President Roosevelt is through with the "Little Businessmen," he might go a notch further down the scale and confer with the jockey swains and their gals.

• • • • •

But, all kidding aside, Eddie and the Missus must have put on a swell performance. The judges were Edmund Lowe, of movie fame and the comic team of Laurel and Hardy.

• • • •

Bing Crosby and Clark Gable enjoyed the dancing of the Capital couple so much that, as members of the committee of the Society Ball to be staged on the eve of the Santa Anita Handicap, they asked the Smiths to give an exhibition that night.

Sonny Workman, star Washington jockey now under contract to Alfred Vanderbilt, did not compete. He gave up when Smith and his wife walked on the floor.

However, I'm told that Sonny made the remark that Eddie and his wife would win and when a movie star gave him an argument Workman bet $300 on the Smiths against the field.

Katy Rawls Sets Sixth Swim Mark Since January 1

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP). Katherine Rawls did her weekly chore today, bettering another United States women's swimming record.

Using a breast stroke, the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., mermaid did 100 yards in 1 minute and 16.9 seconds over a 20-yard course in the Miami Biltmore pool. She was timed by A. A. U. officials. The listed record is 1:20.8, set by Agnes Geraghty, of New York, at Omaha, Nebr., in 1926.

Miss Rawls, voted the country's outstanding woman athlete of 1937 in an Associated Press poll of sports writers, has lowered six national records in the Biltmore pool since January 1.

Cardinal Five Meets Eagles Here Tonight

Catholic Seeks Revenge for Previous Loss in Game at A. U.

Another local clash is scheduled for tonight when the Catholic University basketball team is scheduled to travel from Brookland out to Massachusetts avenue, extended, to meet the American University Eagles in a return game. The starting time is 8:30.

Having just tasted defeat Saturday at the hands of Maryland University's cagers, the Cardinals will be seeking to avenge a 1-point defeat that the Methodists hung on them in the Brookland gym earlier in the season.

American is experiencing a fairly successful season, having just returned from a two-game trip into Virginia that saw them drop a game to the Virginia five at Charlottesville and defeat the Va. Medical College five in Richmond.

The Cardinals have won but two games in 12 this season, but despite that fact, have uncovered one of the leading scorers in the city in the person of Wayne "Whitey" Ambrose, who can assume the lead in the race for point honors tonight by garnering three points.

In the first game, the Eagles came from behind to nip the Cardinals in the last few minutes of play and the Brookland boys are out for revenge as well as their first victory since they defeated Western Maryland two weeks ago.

Hugo Schulze, former Western High star, now a freshman member of Staff Cassell's team, will lead the Eagles. He will be playing with Dud Rogers, Sam Hickey, Emerson Bartlett and George Brown.

Coach Forrest "Fod" Cotton will start Ambrose, Irish Carroll, Rocco Pirro, Vic Miller, and Joe Guyon for the Red Birds.

Santa Anita Offers Tests

List for Handicap, Derby to Shape This Week.

By the United Press.

Arcadia, Calif., Feb. 13.—The list of Who's Who in the $100,000 Handicap and the $50,000 Derby will be drawn up at Santa Anita Park this week with all signs pointing toward a meeting between Seabiscuit and Pompoon in the featured attraction.

The week's races will test candidates for the West's two richest fixtures for the first time this season, and largely will determine which of the dozens of eligibles will prance to the starting post for the Derby on Washington's Birthday and the classic handicap March 5.

The Pompoon-Seabiscuit duel is expected in the $5,000 San Carlos Handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth Saturday. Horsemen predict a field of 20 starters in the San Carlos, ranging from such outsiders as Sweepalot and Watersplash to the Howard and Lochheim aces, the hottest two horses at the track this year.

Pompoon remains the favorite for the handicap in the future book and was closed out in the betting at 3 to 1. Seabiscuit now is quoted at the same price, but wagers still can be laid. A victory for either in the San Carlos definitely would end betting action until the parimutuel pool opens the day of the handicap.

The Derby trials, three 1-mile handicaps for grades "A," "B," and "C," will be held Tuesday. Virtually all Derby candidates will take their final practice spins in these races. The showing of Foxcatcher Farms' Dauber is the key to the probable alignment of the Derby field.

Dauber, bought for $29,000 last fall, never has won a stake, but is known for staying qualities, a sound advantage in a field which mainly will be composed of sprinters.

The Santa Anita Handicap veterans, Time Supply and Top Row, are expected to be entered along with Fairy Hill in one of three 1 1-6-mile events Wednesday. In one of these races Tiger, the Milky Way Farms ace, ranked early choice for the Derby, will start for the first time this winter. Tiger was not named for any of the Derby trials.

U. S. Hockey Team Wins

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—The United States amateur hockey team scored its second straight victory in the world championships here tonight, crushing Norway's squad, 7 to 1.

The Americans collected four goals in the opening period to clinch the victory. Art Bogue, of Detroit, counted twice in this session and George P. Quirk, another Detroiter, and Joseph R. Dondi, New Haven, Conn., each tallied once.

The Norwegians held the United States boys scoreless in the second period as they tallied their only goal of the game, a rising shot by Bogh.

Quirk scored again in the third period and Laurier F. Charest, a product of the Lewiston (Me.) rinks, caged the last two. One of these was a solo dash. Charest picking up the pick from behind his own goal and zigzagging the length of the ice to score from close range. Also in tonight's lineup were Spencer M. Wagnild, Minneapolis; Allen A. Yan, St. Paul; Ray A. Lemieux, Waterville, N. Y.; Jerry Crosby, New York, and Hugh Young, New Haven, Conn.

The United States team, triumphant over Latvia, 1-0 last night, meets Germany tomorrow night.

Americans Trade Emms To Detroit Red Wings

New York, Feb. 13 (AP).—The New York Americans of the National Hockey League today announced a trade with the Detroit Red Wings which brought them Johnny Sorrell in exchange for Leighton (Happy) Emms, another veteran. Both are left wingers.

Heavyweight Crown 'Safe' For America

Here's How It'll Work Out; Schmeling 'Out' Again.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Joe Louis puts his heavyweight title on the line against Nathan Mann a week from Wednesday at New York, and already the atmosphere is heavy with rumors of dirty work at the crossroads. 'Twas ever thus on the eve of a championship brawl, but this time the wise ones insist skullduggery is afoot.

The word is out that Mr. Mann will leave the ring with the crown perched securely atop his sorrel-thatched pate, denials from the Louis camp to the contrary notwithstanding.

Hatched in Promoter Mike Jacob's office, the plot is simple but effective. Louis will drop the duke to Mann, then fulfill his contract with Max Schmeling in June in a meaningless bout. Regardless of the outcome, Louis will be re-matched with Mann and become the first man in history to regain the heavyweight crown.

Schmeling, by this plan, is effectively sidetracked; Jacobs keeps the title in this country; Mann picks up a few bob in exhibitions, and Louis eventually gets the crown back again. It sounds fantastic but the boxing game's history is replete with similar incidents of chicanery.

Years ago Pete Herman, then reigning world's bantamweight champion, conveniently lost to Joe Lunch before sailing to England to engage Jimmy Wilde. Wilde was a dangerous opponent, and Kerman didn't particularly relish the idea of risking the crown in a bout with him. After the fight Herman came home, was re-matched with Lynch and, of course, regained the title.

But the problem has as many angles as a geometric problem and they're all worthy of investigation. Jacobs pulls the strings on Louis and has no intention of letting him get away from the Garden with the title. That is his ace in the hole, and without it he may as well retire from the promotorial field.

Now, if Schmeling should happen to regain the title he'd take the first boat home and that's probably the last America would see of him. He might be good for ten more years of competition against the current crop of European heavyweights, and even if he accidentally blew a decision it's a 20-to-1 shot that the United States wouldn't get a championship bout for another decade. It is this possible—and probable, occurrence that Jacobs is guarding against.

Hence, by depositing the crown with Mann—under iron-clad contract, until after fulfilling his contract, Jacobs precludes all possibility of Mr. Schmeling winning it from Louis and placing the promoter in the embarrassing position of having no titleholder to manipulate.

That brings up the question of whether Schmeling fights Louis with no title at stake, but merely for a few more potatoes to be taxed by Hitler. We don't think so. The German has made it plain that money means nothing to him now. He is fixed for life, financially. But he is possessed with a burning desire to be the first man to regain his lost diadem and will go to any length to realize that ambition.

Some figure Louis isn't the least bit anxious to face the German again with the gloves on, and point to numerous rumors of his retirement from sources close to him as evidence of this. Others contend that the dusky boy would like nothing better than an opportunity to redeem himself in a fight with Max. That kayo he suffered at Schmeling's hands, and the subsequent run-around Max got from Braddock left a sour taste in the mouth of more than a few fans. They regard the German as the better man.

No less an authority than Harry Raskin, Bob Tow's trainer and a member of Braddock's entourage, however, contends that Louis would welcome a return bout. Raskin discussed the matter with Roxborough and Jack Blackburn as well as Louis at Pompton Lakes, and assures us that Joe not only is ready for the bout but ready to win.

There are those who point to Schmeling's decisions over Harry Thomas and Ben Foord as proof that he has slipped since flattening Louis. A top-notcher would kayo both, they say. Maybe, but on the other hand, Schmeling took both in stride and ringsiders agree that he was not at his best in either bout. Why? For the very good reason that he may have been using them to sharpen his fighting tools, perfecting his timing and defensive tactics.

He knows only too well that a man needs a couple of warm-up battles under his belt before going in against a fighter of Louis' calibre, and wants to meet more second raters before the title fight—if it materializes. But here again Jacobs edges into the picture, this time with a cablegram asking Max to quit fighting until after meeting Louis. Jacobs' excuse is he doesn't want the German accidentally bumped off before the fight, which would hurt the gate.

Perhaps he figures Louis may not be able to lose to Mann and he may have to put him in against Schmeling, and if that should be the case, perhaps he doesn't want Schmeling to have those tune-in fights because it might not be so good for Louis.

And so it goes. The grapevine wires are overloaded with rumors, some wrong, some right. But, at any rate, there seems to be something in the air, and it isn't spring.

Georgetown A. C. Leads Civic Basketball Loop

Swinging into the final two weeks of play, Georgetown A. C. still appears to be the ultimate winner in the girl's Civic Basketball League with seven straight victories. If it clinches the championship, as expected, it will meet Agriculture, champion of the Government League in a playoff for The Post Trophy Friday night.

Steele Puts Title on Line In Barth Go

N. Y. Board Refuses to Recognize Bout as a Championship.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 13.—Despite the refusal of the New York State Athletic Commission to recognize it as a championship fight, Freddie Steele, world's middleweight titleholder, puts his title on the block Saturday night against Carmen Barth in what shapes up as the leading bout on this week's national boxing program.

Barth and Steele, whose one-round knockout of Bob Turner several days ago prompted the commission to withdraw recognition, clash in a 15-round bout at Cleveland.

Jimmy Adamick, promising Midland (Mich.) heavyweight, makes his New York debut against Harry Thomas, rugged Chicagoian, in a ten-rounder, at Madison Square Garden, Friday night. Adamick is substituting for Tony Galento, who withdrew from the fight because of an injury to his left hand.

The program:

Detton, Periera On Rassle Card

Dean Detton is booked for a semi-windup bout with Al Periera on Thursday night's wrestling card.

Periera, who claims the European championship, hasn't lost a local match.

The bout will support the Nagurski-Chewaki feature. The latter was disqualified for strangling Detton last week.

Rovers Down Hershey Before Record Crowd

New York, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—The New York Rovers defeated the Hershey Bears, 4-2, in an overtime Eastern Amateur Hockey League game today at Madison Square Garden before a crowd of 15,073.

An Irish amateur boxing team will take part in the international tournament at the Boston Garden, February 14.

Griffith Signs Two Baseball School Graduates

his fancy—Kuhel, at Kansas City, and Gus Suhr, at San Francisco. The price tag on each was $75,000.

"That's too much," said Engel.

Griffith bought Kuhel for $65,000.

Al Simmons, one of his current employes, Griffith has always blamed for the Nats' failure to win the 1930 pennant. Washington was leading the race when it moved into Philadelphia for a Decoration Day double-header. Simmons was on the bench with a sprained ankle, until called into the game as a pinch-hitter in the ninth inning, with the Athletics three runs behind, two on and two out. Simmons hit a home run that tied the score and Washington lost in the fourteenth inning.

In the second game of the same day, with the Nats leading 7-3 and the bases full of Athletics, Simmons again was called in as a pinch-hitter. His home run with the bases full again tied the score and the Nats lost in extra innings. They toppled from the lead in the pennant race, never regained it.

Pennantless for seven seasons, Griffith yearned for a return of the club's former glories. The Nats needed the spark and fire of an inspirational playing manager, he deduced. Johnson was ready to step down anyway.

"The Old Fox scanned his ranks for managerial timber. He called 26-year-old Joe Cronin into his little stucco office at the close of the 1932 campaign. Cronin that year had taken a cut of $2,000 in his $12,000 salary of 1931. He had no suspicion that he was in line for any honors.

"Would you like to manage the Washington Club?" Griffith asked him.

Cronin was dumbfounded.

"Me? Manager?" he sputtered.

"That's right," said Griffith.

"How about Walter Johnson? I don't want the job if it's throwing him out. He's been awfully decent to me."

"It'll be all right with Johnson," promised Griffith, secretly pleased at the youngster's concern for Johnson.

"I'm your man, then," said Cronin.

TOMORROW: Bolstering his team with six new players, acquired on the advice of his young manager, Griffith cops another American League pennant in 1933.

Charlie Norton Retains Lead In D. C. Cage Scoring Drive

'Ineligible' Maryland Basketeer Has 2-Point Advantage After Busy Week Among Colleges.

Charlie "Chuck" Norton, ineligible Maryland University center, held a posthumous lead in the District scoring race as local collegiate cagers closed another busy week of activity Saturday night.

Although he has not played in the Terps' last six contests, the Ogden (Utah) sophomore, who has been placed on scholastic approbation for the remainder of the term, managed to maintain his top position by the scant margin of 2 points. But he is expected to relinquish the honor tonight to his nearest competitor, Wayne Ambrose, when the Catholic University forward takes the floor against American University in the Eagles' gym.

Norton's 146 points in 12 games for an average of 12.1 was the best record and Ambrose's 144 in the same number of clashes gave him an average of 12.

The week's scoring high light was the accomplishment of American University's freshman center, Hugo Schulze. The former Western High cager, tossed in 13 field goals and 3 foul shots against Virginia Medical College for 29 points to top all local one-game individual scoring for the season.

George Knepley, of Maryland, held third place, increasing his mark to 135, while fourth and fifth positions were taken by George Washington men.

Jack Butterworth, Colonial center, held fourth spot with 114 points and his teammate, Bob Faris, forward, was in the fifth notch with a sum of 109.

Cumberland Sports.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13.—Coach Frank McMullen's LaSalle Institute cagers outlasted the St. Francis Xiers Trojans of Morgantown, W. Va., here to hand the West Virginia crew its first defeat in eight starts this season, 24-19.

Jittery after a hazardous ride over the icy highway between Cumberland and Uniontown, Pa., the Trojans were off their stride during the first two periods, which closed with LaSalle leading, 11-5. Coach Louis Merck's boys settled down in the last half to outscore LaSalle by one point.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13.—Fort Hill High School's Sentinels added Hagerstown High cagers to their list of Cumberland Valley Athletic League victims here, where Ine Hillmon easily turned back the Hub City five, 28-16, for their third consecutive loop victory.

The triumph gives Fort Hill a clean slate for their first half of the league campaign. The Sentinels have met the other three teams and will be favored to cop return engagements and the pennant for the second successive season.

Pedens Win Six-Day Race

San Francisco Event to Brother Team.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 13.—Torchy and Doug Peden, of Victoria, B. C., today won San Francisco's six-day bicycle race by the margin of 376 points from the "Red Devil" team of Jerry Rodman and Gerard Debaets.

The Canadian brother team covered 2,221 miles in the 147½ hours of competition. Rodman and Debaets had the same mileage fixture, but their point total was only 1,392 compared with the winners' 1,738.

The final outcome was delayed until after midnight when the newly formed team of Remigio Saavedra, Argentina, and Mike Defilippo, Italy, spilled during a wild jam. It required 13 minutes to straighten out the riders.

The team of Cocky O'Brien, San Jose, Calif., and Russell Allen, Los Angeles, finished third, with Eddie Testa, Los Angeles, and Bobby Echeverria, San Jose, fourth.

Conference Fives Battle For Berths

Tarheels, Red Terrors Favored to Meet for Title.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 13.—Civil warfare on Southern Conference basketball courts will be intense this week, with 17 games scheduled for the stretch struggle to determine which teams will participate in the annual championship tournament.

Eleven of the 15 members are still in the running for the eight berths to be allotted in the Raleigh event.

North Carolina's White Phantoms have had the best of the skirmishing so far, with 10 victories in 11 games, and will probably enter the tourney favored to oust Washington and Lee's 1937 titleholders from the throne.

On the basis of today's standings, N. C. State's Red Terrors loomed as the most likely finalist with North Carolina. State's loop record shows only two defeats in 10 contests.

The Citadel's surprise squad and Washington and Lee's Generals are tied for the third spot with four triumphs and two losses each.

Duke and Maryland, who were slated to be weak on the hardwood this season, are deadlocked in fifth place as the result of impressive comebacks after slow early season starts. The Blue Devils and Old Liners have won six times in 10 appearances.

Clemson, Richmond and Virginia Tech have broken even in eight games.

Two dangerous quints, Wake Forest and Davidson are listed just below the top flight. They meet at Wake Forest tomorrow night.

Other highlights of the week's card will find Duke and Washington and Lee battling at Lynchburg Monday; Wake Forest at Clemson Wednesday; Washington and Lee at North Carolina Thursday; N. C. State at Duke and Davidson at the Citadel Saturday.

Squash Final On Tap Today

G. Glidden, New York, and Weir Oppose.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 13.—Germain Glidden, New York, national squash racquet champion, advanced to the finals of the national tournament here today and meets Leroy Weir, Detroit, tomorrow for the title.

Glidden eliminated E. R. Sargent, Philadelphia, handily in today's quarter-finals round, 15—9, 13—15, 15—4 and 15—6. His semifinals victory came at the expense of Hunter Lott, Philadelphia, in the feature match of the day. Glidden won the first 15—10, lost the second 15—18 and won the last two 18—17 and 15—12.

In the quarter-finals, Weir defeated Neil Sullivan, Philadelphia, and won over Sam Galowin, New York, in the semifinals.

Theodore Manos, Pittsburgh, and A. M. Sonnabend, Boston, meet tomorrow for the Veterans' title. James Robinson, Chicago, defending champion, lost to Sonnabend in the semifinals.

The Boston team won the team title today, defeating New York 4—1. Boston downed Detroit 3—2 in the semifinals, while New York defeated Philadelphia 3—1 in that round.

Undefeated Roanoke '5' Faces Tigers

Plays Hampden-Sydney Tonight and Randolph-Macon Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 13.—Roanoke's point-a-minute Maroons basketball pace-setters in the State this season, will risk an unsullied Old Dominion record against two foes this week, Randolph-Macon and Hampden-Sydney.

Conquerors of Washington and Lee and riding a nine-game winning streak, Roanoke will play at Hampden-Sydney tomorrow night and will jounrney to Ashland for a game with Randolph-Macon on Tuesday.

Victorious in these tilts, the Maroons will then need only to upset the strong Emory and Henry team in their final game of the season next week to clinch the State cage championship.

Washington and Lee's 1937 title-holders focussed their attention on the Southern Conference race and will open a three-game card for the week against Duke at Lynchburg Monday night. The Generals go to North Carolina on Thursday and Virginia Tech on Saturday.

V. M. I. plays at North Carolina on Tuesday, at William and Mary on Friday and Richmond on Saturday. Maryland comes to Virginia on Friday.

William and Mary and Richmond will renew their old athletic rivialry in the Spiders' gymnasium tomorrow night. Another contest on the Monday schedule will find Carson-Newman at Emory and Henry.

Dear Al,

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Elwood Sachsenmaier hopes he has the first filly since Regret to win the Kentucky Derby. Of course, Charlotte Girl is only 2 years old now and must wait another year, but she has shown plenty of merit in her three starts at this track. The daughter of Cohort and Virginella not only has speed, but she shows it on all occasions, both in races and workouts. The other morning she stepped three furlongs in 0:36 1-5 handily in her final prep for last Saturday's $2,000 race. In that test she had to battle her way from behind due to her greenness. Like most young horses, she bears in mind does it so emphatically that she almost removed herself from Saturday's feature. However, once she learns what it is all about and kept on a straight line, it's going to take a good horse to beat her. She might be just another winter flash, like so many Florida juveniles. However, she has a mighty good start and may make her mark in the 3-year-old classic. Col. Bradley seems to be cleaning house. After selling Bow and Arrow the other day, he then made a deal which puts Bookreader under the colors of H. J. Bundscho. I'm still hoping that Bradley will reconsider and enter one of his eligibles in the Kentucky Derby. He says he doesn't own a 3-year-old that has a chance. However, he won with Brokers Tip, a colt that few believed would be within 10 yards of the first horse before the race. The Colonel is down here on a visit from his Palm Beach home.

BILL.

First race—Hello Stranger shows signs of developing into a fair juvenile and may show the way to this field out of that No. 1 post position. Ballad gets another chance under Jockey Kurtsinger's handling. Spanish Mammon for the show end.

Second race—Golden Token gets my call in this field of uncertain maiden 3-year-olds. I'm expecting a good ride from Jockey Stout. Lourdes and Brogan appear to have edges on the others.

Third race—Armour Bearer, in action with light weight, may take down the chief money in this field. This one is a good breaker and the rail position should help. Jon-Jon has been tipped and could awake in this company. Happy Code to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Crowning Glory packs plenty of speed as that recent race indicates. I'm going right back for another mutuel. Jair and Smuggled In to battle it out for what's left.

Fifth race—Blind Eagle runs as if he will win a lot of races for Mrs. Denemark. Seems capable of carrying the 115 pounds and I'm going to be there. Pernie showed improvement last out and appears to be the one to beat. Feng to show.

Sixth race—No Sir is coming to top form and may lead this good field to the wire. I'm swayed by the light weight. Maeriel and Francesco are fit as hands can make horses and are dangerous contenders.

Seventh race—Memoirs is another with featherweight and draws a good rider in Wall. Blox and Prince Cloud are ready for the best and should be in the thick of the stretch struggle.

Eighth race—Black Mischief and Far Cry have the best figure in this field. Dormido may have been kidding and may spring a surprise among these.

Best bet—Blind Eagle.

4,000 to Attend McNutt Dinner Here on Feb. 23

His Candidacy for Democratic Presidential Nomination May Be Hinted.

Government officials, all Democratic members of Congress, some State Governors, the Indiana Society of Washington and various Indiana officials have been invited to attend a reception here February 23 for Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, it was learned yesterday.

At the receptoin—about 4,000 invitations have been issued—the candidacy of McNutt for the Democratic Presidential nomination of 4940 is expected to be hinted unmistakably. There were some in Democratic political circles who stated yesterday that he might be formally launched as a candidate at the affair.

McNutt's political build-up is reported to have been commenced by Frank H. McHale, newly selected Democratic national committeeman from Indiana. McNutt will stop off in Colorado, Wyoming and Indiana on the last leg of his swift trip from the Philippines. He will address the Democratic Editorial Association of his State in Indianapolis on Saturday and it would not be surprising if he would be publicly indorsed there for the Presidency.

The commissioner will return to the Philippines after making his formal report on affairs there to President Roosevelt. He will resign his commission in August, however, and return to the United States soon afterward. His absence from the country so far is regarded as having aided his candidacy, for he had no connection with the court plan battle or developments in connection with sit-down strikes.

Funds for Seed Loans Available This Week

By the United Press.

Farm Credit Administration officials last night said $34,000,000 for emergency feed and seed loans, as authorized under a joint Congressional resolution approved February 4, will be available to farmers early this week, probably tomorrow.

Auction Sales

THURSDAY, FEB. 17, 1938—

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE TWO-STORY AND BASEMENT BRICK DWELLING, NO. 118 ELEVENTH STREET N.E., CONTAINING EIGHT ROOMS, BATH, HOT-WATER HEAT.

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, passed in Equity Cause No. 65103, the undersigned trustee will offer for sale by public auction, in front of the premises, on THURSDAY, THE SEVENTEENTH DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1938, AT FOUR O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, to wit: Lot 36 in William W. Birth's subdivision of Original Lot 1 in Square 925, as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia in Book 15, page 173.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in two equal installments represented by promissory notes of purchaser, payable in one and two years, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $300.00 required of purchaser at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise trustee reserves the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

JOHN J. CARMODY,

Auction Sales

THOS. J. OWEN & SON, AUCTIONEERS. 1431 EYE ST. N.W.

Notice of Trustees' Sale of All Remaining Assets of Mount Vernon Savings Bank.

To holders of Participating Certificates in the Mount Vernon Liquidating Trust, and Creditors, Stockholders and Debtors of the Mount Vernon Savings Bank, and all others concerned:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the undersigned Trustees of the Mount Vernon Savings Bank, in liquidation, pursuant to authority in them vested, will offer for sale, at public auction to the highest bidder or bidders, at the office of Thos. J. Owen & Son, auctioneers, 1431 Eye St. N.W., or at such other place to which the sale may be adjourned, beginning THURSDAY, MARCH THIRD, 1938, between the hours of Nine-thirty o'clock A. M., E. S. T., and Twelve-thirty P. M., and between the hours of One-thirty P. M. and Five o'clock P. M., and each business day thereafter at the same place and during the same hours, until all items are sold, all the remaining assets of the MOUNT VERNON SAVINGS BANK except cash and cash items, consisting of improved and unimproved real estate, and equities therein, first and second trust real estate notes, stocks, bonds, secured and unsecured promissory notes, judgments, accounts receivable, overdrafts and other choses in action, office furniture and fixtures and other chattels, and unknown claims and non-ledger assets. If any, less such items as may be paid or otherwise disposed of prior to the date of sale herein mentioned, which changes to be announced at the time of the sale.

A descriptive list as of December 31, 1937, of the remaining assets so offered for sale is contained in a schedule which may be examined by prospective bidders at Room 206, Machinists Building, Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place, Northwest, Washington, D. C., at the office of the auctioneer on the date of sale. Catalogues of the assets to be sold will be available on and after February Fifth at Room 206, Machinists Building, Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place, N.W., to prospective bidders upon making a deposit of $50.00, which deposit will be refunded upon the return of such catalogues.

Said assets will be sold without recourse and without warranty of any kind or character.

All assets will be offered for sale, item by item, as listed in the catalogue. When all of the individual items have been offered for sale, the assets will then be offered for sale as an entirety, and if the highest bid as an entirety received and noted exceeds the total of the bids for individual items received and noted, the assets will be sold to the highest bidder as an entirety; otherwise the assets will be declared sold to the makers of the highest bids received and noted for individual items. All bids for individual items offered will be received and noted only on condition that the said items may subsequently be offered and sold as an entirety.

Bidders on the assets as an entirety must qualify by making a deposit of $25,000.00 with the auctioneer, in cash or certified check or cashier's check on a bank or trust company in the District of Columbia, for any item at the time such bid is received and noted, and upon failure to make such payment the auctioneer will immediately proceed to re-offer such item for sale and no further bid shall be considered from such bidder.

Any amount deposited by a successful bidder to qualify which is less than the total purchase price, will be retained and applied on account of the purchase price; any amount deposited by a successful bidder to qualify in excess of the purchase price will be returned to such successful bidder.

Any or all deposits made by any bidder for an individual item may, so far as applicable, be applied on account of the required deposit in order to qualify him to bid when the assets are offered for sale as an entirety.

Any deposit received from an unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the item shall be knocked down to some other bidder.

Any successful bidder may assign or transfer his bid.

The purchaser may, at the time of settlement, deposit with the Trustees on account of the purchase price, at their distributive value, Participating Certificates of the Mount Vernon Liquidating Trust entitled to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale.

TERMS OF SALE: ALL CASH. Settlement to be made at Room 206, Machinists Building, Ninth Street and Mount Vernon Place N. W., Washington, D. C., within thirty days from date of last day of sale or the deposit will be forfeited, and such asset or assets resold at the cost and risk of the defaulting purchaser after five (5) days previous advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or the forfeited deposit, Trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Rents, taxes and fire insurance, etc., on real estate, or any other proper items, will be adjusted as of the date of settlement. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, notary fees and revenue stamps on real estate transfers, to be at the cost of the purchaser.

All real estate sold subject to encumbrances and leases, if any, as stated in the catalogue or announced at the time of sale.

The Trustees reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

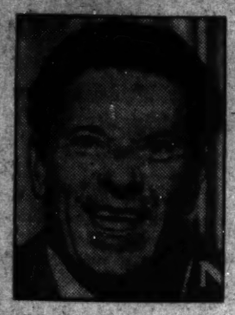
Bob Burns Says—



I guess maybe it's because this is a new country out here, but people seem kinda restless. They wanta keep movin' around all the time and don't stay with one job very long like they do down home.

The other day a man applied to me for a job workin' around the house and I says, "Well, I want a good, steady man that'll stay with me."

He says, "Well, you can depend on me—I can give you recommendations of 214 people that I worked for last year."

ROY POWERS, EAGLE SCOUT— Roy and Chunky Explore. By Paul Powell

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

MAY ARE WE TAKING THIS TRAIL, ROY?—THE CABIN IS WEST OF HERE
I THOUGHT WE'D CUT OVER TO SHELDON LAKE FIRST—THIS TIME OF YEAR WE MIGHT SEE A BEAVER, OR AT LEAST SOME BEAVER SIGNS
BEAVERS! I THOUGHT THEY WOULDN'T STAY NEAR HUMAN HABITATIONS—AND THERE'S AN OLD FACTORY ON SHELDON LAKE—REMEMBER?
OH, THAT PLACE HAS BEEN DESERTED FOR NEARLY 20 YEARS—THEY MADE SMALL CRAFT FOR THE NAVY DURING THE WORLD WAR

WAIT A SECOND, CHUNKY! IT LOOKS AS IF THIS PLACE ISN'T DESERTED—LOOK AT THIS CAN—IT'S BEEN RECENTLY OPENED—

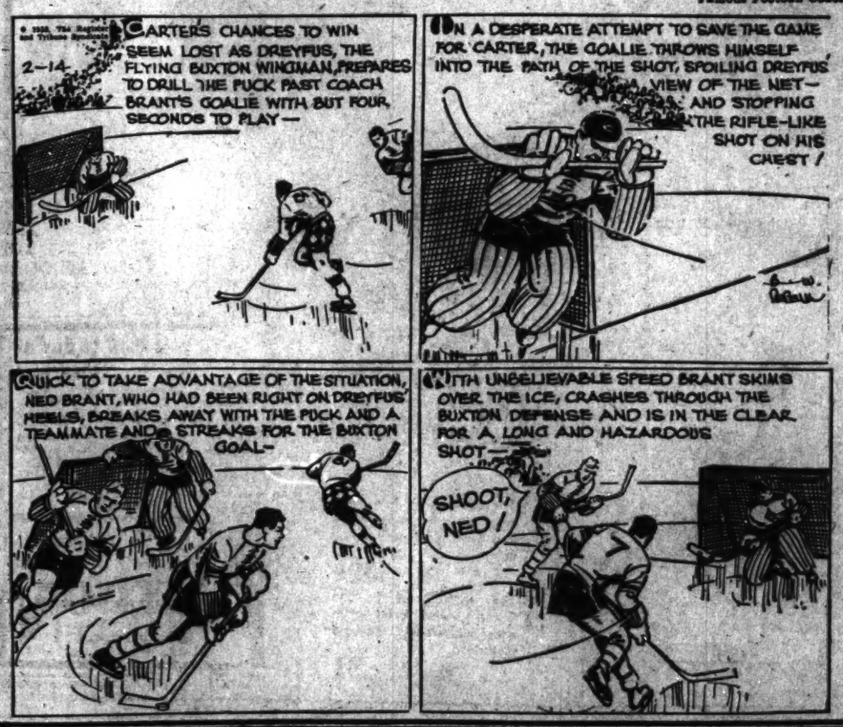
NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics By Bob Zuppke

Famous Football Coach.



CARTER'S CHANCES TO WIN SEEM LOST AS DREYFUS, THE FLYING BUXTON WINGMAN, PREPARES TO DRILL THE PUCK PAST COACH BRANT'S GOALIE WITH BUT FOUR SECONDS TO PLAY—
IN A DESPERATE ATTEMPT TO SAVE THE GAME FOR CARTER, THE GOALIE THROWS HIMSELF INTO THE PATH OF THE SHOT, SPOILING DREYFUS' VIEW OF THE NET—AND STOPPING THE RIFLE-LIKE SHOT ON HIS CHEST!
QUICK TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE SITUATION, NED BRANT, WHO HAD BEEN RIGHT ON DREYFUS' HEELS, BREAKS AWAY WITH THE PUCK AND A TEAMMATE AND STREAKS FOR THE BUXTON GOAL—WITH UNBELIEVABLE SPEED BRANT SKIMS OVER THE ICE, CRASHES THROUGH THE BUXTON DEFENSE AND IS IN THE CLEAR FOR A LONG AND HAZARDOUS SHOT—

Finance and Business

Stock Market Holds Position During Week

Operators Inclined to Expect Inflation Aid and Better Business.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Feb. 13.—Financial markets were reluctant to give battle last week and merely held their positions with sentries posted on all sides. It looked as though speculative sections were inclined to look forward to aid from inflation later on and to seasonal improvement in business, but too many present factors of discouragement were present to permit any determined advance. On the advance stocks ran into cautious selling, just as on the decline no liquidation of consequence was uncovered.

Railroad stocks were the principal source of strength. In spite of a further drop in car loadings for last week, as compared with a year ago, the railroad stock list climbed about 5 per cent in market value. That clearly was an attempt of the market to anticipate an increase in freight rate charges which it is expected the Interstate Commerce Commission will grant before the end of this month. Should the railroads get the full 15 per cent increase they seek the addition to revenues, under present conditions of low traffic, would by no means put them out of financial danger, but it would greatly strengthen their position.

Industry Drags.

Lessening for the time being of the danger of further railroad bankruptcies would do something to quiet nerves in the financial district. Industrial stocks move up only slightly on slack ... volume, and that sectio... market had little suppor... statistics. Bonds, on t... improved on railroa... that group and on an e... trend for the gilt-edge...

Meanwhile Presi... velt went forward with ... for a greatly increased ... establishment and for a re... ion of heavy relief outlay. ...ress was asked, as a starter, for a deficiency appropriation of a quarter of a billion, to take care of the addition of 3,000,000 or so to the unemployed in recent weeks, as the President put it. Those requests for appropriations are bound to increase, balancing the budget this year or next year patently is not even being considered, and higher taxation as well as increased deficit financing through tapping bank credit is a certainty.

Wages and Prices.

On the domestic trade front the important news of the week was the simultaneous agreement of the United States Steel Corporation to continue its recognition of the C. I. O. as organizing unit for its own members, with the present wage scale to be left undisturbed until the end of this month, and the cutting of $4 a ton in price of cold rolled steel sheets. It is too early to say that the steel price reduction heralds an all round lowering of steel price levels, but that is quite possible. If the reductions should stimulate consumption, the effect would not have the bearish color which the market at first was inclined to give it, an inclination reinforced by the supposition that lower steel prices would mean lower wages for the industry, with strikes as a possible outcome. At any rate more flexibility has been given the steel mills and that was desirable. Uncertainty has held down steel buying; a definite price and wage policy would let steel consumers know how to make their own plans.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Gain 2.45% in Week

New York, Feb. 13.—New York City bank stocks moved higher during the past week and registered fair gains at the close, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate value of 16 leading issues on February 11 totaled $1,387,771,000 compared with $1,354,639,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $33,132,000, or 2.45 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 4.75 per cent compares with a yield of 4.87 per cent on February 4. The current market value is now 99 per cent of the known book value, compared with 97 per cent a week ago. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an avergae of 14.5 times their known earnings against 14.2 times on February 4.

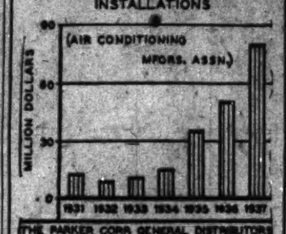
D. C. Harpoonist Will Hunt Whale Off Golden Gate

Jim Moran, the Washington harpoonist, yesterday took over from the United States Coast Guard the job of ridding San Francisco Bay of one huge whale.

Moran, equipped with a harpoon and a whaling cap supplied by a Washington antique shop, was unperturbed when he learned that a dead whale had grounded on the south fringe of the Golden Gate. "Where there's one whale there's more—maybe a hundred," he declared, renewing his vow to clear the bay of all mammal menaces to navigation.

The three Coast Guard vessels that have been conducting a hunt for the whale stood idly at their piers yesterday. Their commanders indicated that until Moran began his hunt they wouldn't shoot at a whale except in self-defense.

Air Conditioning Sales Set Record



Boston, Mass., Feb. 13.—An infant industry has rapidly grown into a husky youth—even during the depression years. Sales of air-conditioning apparatus last year added another record to the laurels of 1937 when they topped 1936 sales by 60 per cent. Furthermore, sales last year were eight times as great as in 1933.

Farm Exhibit At Greenbelt Draws Crowd

Even City Folk Interested in Prefabricated Steel Buildings.

Many farmers and still more city folks showed their interest in rural improvement yesterday by visiting the Farm Security Administration's model farm unit at Greenbelt.

The city folks were slightly confused about some of the buildings, according to Joel B. Gibson, of the FSA construction division. One of them thought the smokehouse was where you go when you feel like a cigarette.

The farmers recognized the smoke-house, the hen house and the barn immediately, despite the ultra-modern, all-steel construction. They weren't entirely won over, however, and told FSA officials as much. One man insisted a horse couldn't live 24 hours in the all-steel stall because of lack of ventilation.

The FSA officials had an answer for all complaints. They pointed out that the barn was designed primarily for use in the South, where it will be possible to leave the doors open.

The prefabricated unit, which a farmer and his hired man could set up in a few hours at a cost of about $2,000, was established at Greenbelt to demonstrate the possibilities of steel in low-cost rural construction. Ultimately it will be turned over to Greenbelt High School for the use of home economics classes.

According to the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., manufacturers of the unit, the buildings are "calamity proof." The steel construction is protected against fire, lightning, vermin and termites.

Overlapping "crimps" in the roofs and walls will keep out moisture. Earthquakes and windstorms which attack the farmstead will have to combat steel pillars rooted in steel footings.

The architect of the outhouse thoughtfully made it "Halloween-proof," according to Robert F. Kneipp of the steel company. Its frame is bedded in a concrete drum which guarantees pranksters considerable opposition.

Many Advantages.

Advantages of the construction method are many, in the opinion of Department of Agriculture officials. The structures are not patented and can be produced by any sheet metal fabricating plant. Use of standardized 4-foot panels means that the basic floor-plan can be expanded to include as many rooms as needed.

Gibson believes the buildings will last as long as they are kept painted. He considers the unit well adapted to the Bankhead-Jones act, which provides for building loans to farmers. "The fixed cost and known length of life of prefabricated buildings keeps at a minimum the cost of making loans and supervising construction," he pointed out.

The Greenbelt dwelling consists of a living room, three bedrooms, combination kitchen and dining room and front and back porches. A fireplace and circulating air system provides a simple central heating plant.

The henhouse will accommodate 50 birds, the barn two cows and two mules or horses. The outhouse is a one-holer.

Brophy, CIO, Urges $600,000,000 Fund

Indianapolis, Feb. 13 (AP).—John Brophy, of Washington, national director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, demanded yesterday that Congress appropriate $600,000,000 at once to provide Works Progress Administration jobs for 3,500,000 workers for the next four months.

Brophy spoke before a Lincoln's birthday mass meeting here. He estimated 14,000,000 persons are out of work. He said the C. I. O. demanded money to provide 1,000,000 more relief jobs than would be maide available through the President's proposal for $250,000,000 appropriation.

Steel Activity Dips Further To 30 Per Cent

Consumers Are Limiting Purchases to Cement Requirements.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 13.—A "waiting policy" continues to rule the steel market with consumers limiting their purchases to current requirements, the magazine Steel said today. The national operating rate dropped 1 point last week to 30 per cent. Most buyers, the magazine said, ask immediate delivery, indicating inventories are well cleared.

Railroads were viewed as reluctant to place orders for new stock pending the outcome of their requests for higher freight rates. Only 25 cars were bought during January.

Steel ingots produced in January totaled 1,723,266 gross tons, the lowest January production in 20 years except for 1932 and 1933.

The industry, however, is beginning to receive some tonnage placed in connection with the naval construction program while other shipbuilding needs following tanker and cargo ship placements are relied on to furnish the tonnage over an extended period, the magazine said.

Detroit at 47 Per Cent

Operating rates at five centers remained unchanged during the week with Chicago at 25 per cent; Eastern Pennsylvania at 30; Wheeling at 44; Cleveland at 33, and Detroit at 47.

Pittsburgh declined 1 point to 32 per cent; Youngstown 3 points down to 23; Birmingham 2 points to 61, and Cincinnati fell off 16 to 28. New England gained 7 points to 27 and Buffalo 4.5 points to 18.5.

The $4 per ton reduction on cold-rolled sheets, announced last week, brought that grade to a parity with its competitive material, hot-rolled, single-picked and oiled sheets, used principally in automotive construction, Steel reported.

Automobile assemblies showed slight gains during the week with General Motors producing 20,950 compared with 21,230 the preceding week; Ford's output was 20,760 against 10,700; Chysler advanced to 9,050 from 2,950 while other producers assembled 7,070 compared with 6,563.

Trustees for Erie To Be Named Today

Cleveland, Feb. 13 (AP).—To Federal Judge Samuel H. West fell the task of naming tomorrow a trusteeship to hoist Erie Railroad from another of its historic financial swamps.

Railroad circles discussed the possibility that Judge West would select the road's president, Charles E. Denney. In this case Judge West faced the legal necessity of appointing one or more additional men who have held no connection with the railroad in the last year.

Only one trustee needed be named if he were an "outsider" and Interstate Commerce Commission approval was necessary on any appointments.

The courts are an old story to this freight hauler, which hasn't paid a dividend on its common stock since its 1895 reorganization, and only rarely in its various stages before that.

Same Train Hits 2 Cars ¾-Mile Apart; 2 Killed

Pleasant Hill, Mo., Feb. 13 (AP).—Two persons were killed here today in a pair of grade-crossing crashes only ¾ of a mile apart involving the same train.

Herbert Rosanbalm, 25, was killed when a Missouri Pacific train struck his machine at the outskirts of the town. Still dragging the wreckage of Rosanbalm's car, the train struck the second machine, driven by Marion McCrary, 18, near the station and killed Miss Ida Clawson, 31. McCrary was seriously hurt.

40 Guards Hunt 2 Mad Fugitives Of Killer Type

Illinois Wood Combed in Vain for Pair Called 'Very Dangerous.'

By the Associated Press.

Chester, Ill., Feb. 11.—Forty guards combed a densely wooded tract near here today in search of two criminally insane patients, who escaped from the Illinois Security Hospital last night.

Few clues were found by officers in their hunt for Paul Harrison, 33, described as a "dangerous hammer killer" and his companion, Peter Florek, 22, listed as "very dangerous."

Guards were stationed at strategic points along highways and bridges while parties searched an area several miles square.

Searching parties said the men may have climbed aboard a passing freight train. Guards also were investigating the possibility the patients received aid from outside in making their escape.

Harrison was adjudged insane and sentenced to the institution six years ago after he had killed four persons in Chicago.

Hospital officials expressed fear Harrison might try to find and kill his former wife, Mrs. Margaret Harrison, of Chicago, whom he tried to include among his victims before he was apprehended in 1932.

Policeman, Late, Forced to Read Chapter in Bible

Policeman Wade W. Carter was kept in after roll call yesterday because he was late for work.

And the irony of the whole thing was that instead of being made to write a penance on the blackboard he had to read it—the first chapter of Genesis in the Bible.

Captain Sidney J. Marks, commander of the Twelfth Precinct, was the teacher yesterday and imposed the sentence. It is the custom in the Police Department for each man to attend roll call before beginning a trick of duty. Carter was tardy.

The Bible which Carter read before taking his beat was supplied the precinct last week by the American Bible Society.

Mrs. M. H. Smith, Ill 3 Weeks, Dies

Mrs. Margaret Harvey Smith, 59, resident of Washington more than 40 years, died yesterday at her home, 1910 Kalorama road northwest. She had been ill three weeks.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., the daughter of Edward J. and Margaret L. Harvey, Mrs. Smith came to Washington as a girl. For many years she lived in Georgetown.

Funeral services will be held at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, followed by requiem mass at 9 a. m. at St. Paul's Catholic Church, Fifteenth and V streets northwest. Burial will be in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Smith leaves two sons, Charles Gordon Smith, jr., of Washington, and Edward Harvey Smith, Charlottesville, Va.; a daughter, Miss Lydia Lea Smith, Washington and three sisters, Mrs. C. L. Billard, Mrs. James F. Casey, and Miss Mary Harvey, of Washington.

William Olinger Dies in Maryland

William E. Olinger, 72, in the grocery business in Washington for more than 35 years, died yesterday at his home in Berwyn, Md. He had been ill several weeks.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Annie Philips Olinger, of Berwyn; three daughters, Mrs. Gertrude Clifton Bradley, of Washington; Mrs. Anna Grayson Williams, Decatur Heights, Md., and Mrs. Ruth L. Wagner, now in Guam; two brothers, S. G. and D. T. Olinger, and a sister, Mrs. A. W. Testes, of Warrenton.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at his home, followed by burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Hearings to Open Today On District's Tax Bill

Public hearings on the District's 1939 tax bill will open at 10:30 a. m. today in the District Committee offices at the Old House Office Building.

The hearings will be conducted by Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee on District fiscal affairs. First witnesses scheduled to appear are the Commissioners of the District. The tax bill is expected to provide approximately $2,600,000.

Additional open hearings on the 1939 appropriation for the District will be held by a Senate sub-committee.

Teacher at Cardoza High Owns Collection of Rare Lincolnia

Portion of the dress, black silk with a white flower pattern, worn by Mrs. Abraham Lincoln to the performance at Ford's Theater on the night her husband was shot. Her likeness is at lower left, opposite the signature of her son, Robert Todd Lincoln, whose note reads: "Autograph sent to Dr. J. E. Washington for kindness in appreciation for the loan of this piece of silk for 10 days."

Dr. John E. Washington, art teacher at Cardoza High School, has been collecting mementoes of Abraham Lincoln for 35 years. Yesterday he came to The Post and exhibited a few of his highly prized objects which, with hundreds of others, occupy considerable space in his home at 463 Florida avenue northwest.

One treasured possession is an autograph book containing not only the signature "A. Lincoln," but those of James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson, Sam Houston, Roscoe Conkling, Stephen A. Douglass, Jefferson Davis, Horace Greeley and scores of other members of Congress, Supreme Court justices and Cabinet officers of the Lincoln Administration and the years immediately before and after.

Andrew H. Ragan, born in Georgetown in 1835, obtained the autographs while he was a Senate employe from 1852 until after the War Between the States, first as a page and later as doorkeeper. He died in 1916.

Also acquired by Ragan was a piece of the blood-stained bedsheet from Lincoln's deathbed, now in Dr. Washington's possession. Its authenticity was vouched for by the late Warren Choate, Ragan's brother-in-law.

A similar item is the remnant cut from the black silk dress which Mrs. Lincoln wore on the night of the assassination in Ford's Theater. Spots of blood may be detected in the fabric. According to documentary evidence, it was obtained by William Slade, a messenger for Lincoln.

In 1916, the late Robert Todd Lincoln, son of the Emancipator, borrowed the souvenir from Dr. Washington, rewarding him with his own autograph.

Besides the Presidents, justices, Cabinet heads, Senators, Representatives and diplomats represented in the autograph album, it also contains the signatures of such famous visitors to the Senate chamber as Joseph Jefferson, Maggie Mitchell and other stage celebrities; Joseph Henry, first secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and the first Mayors of Washington.

800 Broadcasters To Hear Wheeler

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, will address more than 800 members of the National Association of Broadcasters at the sixteenth annual convention at the Willard Hotel today.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the Federal Communications Commission, and T. A. M. Craven, radio engineering authority, will also speak at the three-day session.

John Elmer, retiring president, will preside at the convention which will consider reorganization with a salaried president.

Mrs. Mabel H. Houghton Dies; Ex-D. C. Resident

New York, Feb. 13 (U.P.).—Mrs. Mabel Hollister Houghton, former Washington resident and widow of Arthur A. Houghton, president of the Corning Glass Works, died at her New York home after a brief illness.

Mrs. Houghton lived in Washington from 1924 to 1926. She was the daughter of Phoebe Moore Conklin and George Hollister, of Rutherford, N. J.

Her son and daughter and four granddaughters survive. Episcopal funeral serivecs will be held at her home tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Hope Cemetery, Corning, N. Y.

Bone May Ask Boost in New Relief Program

$250,000,000 Sought by Roosevelt Insufficient, Westerners Fear.

By the Associated Press.

A movement to increase the $250,000,000 emergency relief appropriation requested by President Roosevelt appeared to be developing yesterday among some Senators from Plains States and the Far West.

Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington observed that relief demands in his State had increased because of the migration of former "dust bowl" residents to the northwest. He said he thought an increase in the amount of the emergency appropriation might be necessary.

Drought in the Great Plains States has made the relief situation there critical, declared Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska.

Norris Blames Drought.

"The condition of many farmers is especially bad," he said, "because they haven't had any crops in five years."

Norris said he would support a larger appropriation if it were demonstrated that such action would be necessary "to keep people from starving."

Senator Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, said he believed $250,000,000 would be sufficient to meet needs, although he pointed out that drought distress was acute in his State.

Capper Cites "Dust Bowl".

Some of the farmers in the "dust bowl" section of Western Kansas have exhausted all of their resources and their need is great, said Senator Capper (Republican) Kansas. He added he was inclined, nevertheless, to accept the estimate prepared by the WPA as sufficient to meet demands.

Representative Cannon (Democrat) Missouri, received yesterday from Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri, a letter saying much distress was unavoidable unless the President's request were granted.

"While this emergency is worst in the large industrial cities, there is an acute situation in a number of rural counties," the Governor reported.

E. C. Dunn Dies, City Manager Of Alexandria

Supervised Modernization of Municipality for 46 Years.

Emmett Clarke Dunn, 76, city manager of Alexandria and a distinguished civil engineer, died early yesterday morning at his home 504 Duke street, following a heart attack. Saturday afternoon he complained of being ill. A physician was summoned. Mr. Dunn died at 12.52 a. m.

Mr. Dunn, who was the first Alexandrian to hold the position of city manager, first came to this city in 1892 and was associated as a civil engineer with his father with the then Virginia Midland, now Southern Railway.

The position of city engineer was created in 1895 and he was the first incumbent. With two short interludes he held that position until September 14, 1934, when he was appointed acting city manager to succeed Wallace Lawrence, resigned, and on February 12, 1935, was appointed city manager, which position he held until his death.

During his term as city engineer Mr. Dunn was responsible for practically every public improvement, such as streets, sewers, schools and fire engine houses. He was noted throughout the United States for the high quality of work performed under his direction.

Mr. Dunn was born in Richmond, Va., the son of the late Willias M. S. and Sally Anthony Dunn, and received his education at McGuire's School, that city. He was a life member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, a member of the vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club.

The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow, in the home, with burial in Ivy Hill cemetery. The family has requested friends to refrain from sending flowers.
